Senators Map A Relentless Investigation Of Campaigns

Inquiry to Include 'Coercion of Votes'

Will Be First of Score of Quizzes; $900,000 Appropriated.

By Robert C. Albright.

The "compromise" Senate investigation of the political use of Federal funds yesterday voted for an uncompromising inquiry into any violation of the corrupt practices act "by or on behalf of any candidate for Senatorial nomination."

Warning all Government agencies to "keep their hands off" any election campaign, and admonishing all candidates that "improper conduct" would be fully investigated and prosecuted, the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee adopted a vigorous resolution.

Framed by Walsh.

Action was announced by Chairman Sheppard, following the first meeting of a committee whose powers had been strengthened by eleventh-hour Senate approval of a resolution authorizing investigation of "vote coercion" by the Government of State agencies using Federal funds.

The strong statement approved by the committee was framed by Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, who with Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, had been added to the group at the last minute by Vice President Garner. They took the places of Senators Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, and Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, resigned. Other members of the group are O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, and White (Republican), of Maine.

Scope of Inquiries.

Financed by an $80,000 Senate appropriation, the campaign committee was the first of a score of recess investigations authorized by House and Senate to organize and strike. A veritable rash of Congressional inquiries, backed by nearly $900,000 in combined appropriations, was about to fill the summer lull in Capitol activity left by congressional adjournment Thursday night. They ranged from a $500,000 Senate, House and executive agency investigation of monopolies to a special $5,000 Senate inquiry into tax-exempt Federal-State securities and salaries.

A let-up was promised in only one investigation. Chairman Min-

8,000 Who Dallied Over Business Tax Will Be Fined $5

The 8,000 Washington business and professional operators who did not apply for a business privilege license will be assessed $5 each, Tax Administrator A. F. Brooke said yesterday.

At the deadline yesterday 30,000 persons had filed their applications. Approximately 2,000 were in the mails. Brooke estimated 40,000 operators were required to file applications under the new tax law.

Applications postmarked not later than midnight yesterday will be accepted.

New Chain Bridge Dedicated With Address of Senator Glass

Senator Glass (right), of Virginia, was a surprise speaker and guest of honor yesterday at the dedication of Chain Bridge. With him is Representative Howard Smith, also of Virginia.

5,000 Attend Exercises at $393,000 Structure, Which Is Longest Continuous Girder Span in U. S.; Col. Sultan Speaks.

With Senator Carter Glass as a surprise speaker and guest of honor, more than 5,000 Washingtonians and their neighbors from across the Potomac joined yesterday in the dedication of the new $393,000 Chain Bridge, longest continuous girder span in the United States.

"I feel I should be here because I fought for the bridge," said the 80-year-old Senator in his first public address outside the halls of Congress for two years.

"I am known as an adversary of every attempt to spend the people's money uselessly. But I obtained $100,000 more for the bridge through the Appropriations Committee. Col. Sultan is the only man who ever made a spendthrift out of me.

"And now that the bridge is completed, I intend to use it often in traveling to and from the Capitol and my home in Virginia."

McNary, Snell Flay Congress' PeakSpending

It 'Abandoned Obligation to American People,' G. O. P. Chiefs Say.

A bitter Republican assault on the legislative record and spending peaks reached by the Seventy-fifth Congress came yesterday in the wake of adjournment as Senate and House minority leaders charged the last New Deal Congress "abandoned its obligation to the American people."

Senate Minority Leader McNary and House Minority Leader Snell, in a joint statement, said it was "the first duty of Congress to remain in Washington and adopt measures to alleviate the paralysis of business and halt the downward spiral of economic forces engulfing the country."

Representative Taber, of New York, ranking Republican member of the House Appropriations Committee, assailed the "extravagance" of the session and a spending program he said would lead to "total collapse." He estimated the peacetime spending record of the session at $13,371,001,048, compared with the official figure of $11,317,483,862.

Await President's Signature.

Meanwhile, Administration relief and recovery agencies awaited only the President's signature on the $3,753,000,000 spending-lending bill to start moving the session's billions. Public Works Administration officials were ready to allocate about $500,000,000 at once. The Works Progress Administration was expected to start bolstering

Hull Cautions Reich to Pay Austria Debt

No Excuse for Disowning Relief Loans by U. S., Sharp Note Warns.

By the United Press.

Secretary of State Hull yesterday revealed that he had advised Germany that attempts to repudiate Austria's war debts and private loans will not be countenanced by this Government.

The disclosure was made only a few hours after Reich Economics Minister Walter Funk, in a speech at Bremen, formally repudiated German obligations to shoulder Austria's debts, despite the fact the little republic has been absorbed in "the greater Germany," and berated the United States as the "center of disturbances" in world economic affairs.

At the time of Germany's bloodless conquest of Austria in March, Austria owed the United States $50,000,000 of which $24,055,708 represented post-war advances for food supplies. The remainder represents private loans, bonds and similar obligations.

On April 6, shortly after the Anschluss, Hull notified the Reich government that the United States

U.S. Rests Case Against Landis, Placing Him at Murder Scene

By Howard F. Wentworth.

In a dramatic last-minute move, the Government yesterday placed James L. (Jimmy) Landis at the actual scene of his wife's killing and then rested its case as the 24-year-old former fireman's murder trial neared an end in District Court.

Two separate pleas for a directed acquittal were denied by Justice Jesse Adkins.

Counsel for Landis indicated they might switch their entire line by discarding contentions the young wife met an accidental death and adopt a complete new theme—including a possible plea of temporary insanity.

Although refusing to reveal their plans, Defense Attorneys Russell Kelly and Jean Boardman admitted the chance of a surprise move. Landis, they said, will take the witness stand in his own behalf.

The crowd in the courtroom strained in their chairs during last minutes of yesterday's session as Prosecutor Cecil Hefli read to the jury a written statement made by the defendant soon after his arrest. Introduction of this statement had been argued bitterly since early in the trial.

Admitted over defense objections, the statement was a contradiction of the defendant's first story to police and detailed events during an automobile ride with his wife the night she was found beaten and

By Hope Ridings Miller,

Nahant, Mass., June 17.—Teeming with tourists, this picturesque little resort town awaits its most important event in years—the Roosevelt-Clark wedding, scheduled for high noon tomorrow.

From all corners of the country—by plane, train and automobile, there was a gathering of the Roosevelt clan today in this rockbound Republican stronghold. Biggest event of the day was the rehearsal this afternoon at 5 o'clock in the ivy-covered little Union Church, where tomorrow the youngest and only unmarried son of the President will exchange vows with a Back Bay Boston girl.

John Answers Questions.

Following the rehearsal, the prospective bridegroom and members of the wedding party pushed their way through a crowd estimated at 1,500 which clustered around the green and white striped canopy that leads into the church. A few minutes later, while the bride-elect, her attendants and the ushers were dressing for the dinner tonight on the President's yacht, the Potomac, John Roosevelt turned up at the City Hall press quarters for the occasion, to hold his last press conference before he becomes a benedict.

In an exceptionally good humor, though somewhat nervous, he answered a barrage of questions fired at him from all sides. He did not take part in his own wedding rehearsal, he said, because he "wanted to get a bird's eye view of the thing." Substituting for Miss Clark in the rehearsal was Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt, whose train for the occasion was a sheet tied around the waist.

Order Out of Chaos.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., who will serve as his brother's best man, took complete charge of the practice ceremony after the bride-elect, obviously upset about the event, turned panic-stricken to members of the wedding party and cried, "who knows anything about a wedding rehearsal?" Despite the momentary confusion, however, young Franklin D. Roosevelt brought order out of chaos as he instructed ushers and bridesmaids on their procedure. The bride-elect's mother, Mrs. F. Haven Clark, dressed in a snappy black and white ensemble, was among spectators at the rehearsal, as were James Roosevelt, Elliott Roosevelt and John Boettiger.

Contrary to the original plan that stipulated attendants were to approach the altar on the right-hand side, the wedding party today moved down the left aisle and de-

Warning Issued As Woman Dies Of Spotted Fever

The Public Health Service yesterday issued a new warning against Rocky Mountain spotted fever, following the District's first 1938 death from that cause.

Mrs. Margaret Clay Franklin, 23, of 1344 Columbia road northwest, died Wednesday in Emergency Hospital after a ten-day illness. Members of her family were unable to account for her infection, unless she was bitten by a tick she plucked from the ankle of her husband, James Franklin, when he returned from South Carolina.

In a statistical report, Brock C. Hampton and Harry G. Tubank, of the Public Health Service, pointed out that the period of highest incidence for the Atlantic States apparently begins in May, reaches its peak in July and drops abruptly in October. The report shows that, between 1933 and 1937, inclusive, there were 32 cases and 13 deaths in the District.

Prague Will Demobilize Reserves; Goebbels Hits Provocations.

By the Associated Press.

Prague, June 17.—As the government announced today the 70,000 reserves mobilized on May 21 would be demobilized by midnight tomorrow, word was received from Bayreuth, Germany, that a Czechoslovakian military airplane was sighted crossing the German border near the Bavarian village of Lam, about 4 miles from the frontier.

At the time the report was received, Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels, of Germany, addressing an East Prussian party rally at Koenigsberg, Germany, was declaring Czechoslovakian provocations against Germany "cannot continue." Goebbels called on foreign nations not to continue trying Germany's patience by stirring up Czechoslovakia instead of calling the Prague government to order.

The plane alleged offending flew low, one observer reporting he had seen a passenger leaning over the side of the plane photographing the German countryside.

Army Strength Same.

The Czechoslovak reserves were called to the colors when Europe appeared on the brink of war over the Sudeten German minority problem.

The cabinet and Sudeten parliamentary representatives had been in session today seeking to draft a minority representation statute acceptable to Konrad Henlein, Sudeten leader, and to the other minorities.

Earlier in the day the Government had announced that despite the demobilization of the reserves the army would be maintained at its present strength of about 500,000 men. This will be done by calling to the colors at once all conscripts who are due to serve this year.

Il Duce Asks Britain Drop Spain in Pact

Franco Victory or Aid's Withdrawal Feared Too Far Away.

Rome Wants Friendship to Become Effective Immediately.

By the United Press.

London, June 17.—Premier Mussolini, apparently abandoning hope of an early insurgent victory in Spain, has asked Great Britain to consider putting the Anglo-Italian pact of friendship into operation without consideration of the Spanish complications, it was learned tonight.

British officials, although reserving formal reaction to the proposal passed through the British Embassy in Rome, indicated Prime Minister Chamberlain would find it extremely difficult to modify the accord in the manner Il Duce wishes so long as Italy continues to play an important military role in Spain.

The Anglo-Italian pact was signed at Easter in Rome with provisions it would not become effective until Mussolini moved to withdraw his Black Shirt legionnaires from the insurgent armies, and until Britain, in return, formally recognized the Italian conquest of Ethiopia.

"A New Definition."

Mussolini's approach to a speeding up of British recognition of Italian Ethiopia and a return to friendship in the Mediterranean was said to have been a tentative one suggesting Britain co-operate in a "new definition of conditions" for making the pact operative without delay.

This would entail a sidetracking of the Spanish problem, which has keenly aroused public feeling in Britain as result of the recent bombings and sinkings of British merchant ships by insurgent planes. In some instances the British public has been led to believe the attacking planes were Italian ones serving Insurgent Gen. Franco.

Withdrawal Delayed.

Fascist leaders, it was disclosed, have come to share the opinion of many military experts the Spanish war may continue for months, while prospects of a full agreement on the nonintervention plan for withdrawing foreign "volunteers" from Spain still are remote.

Italy contends she is ready to participate in the "volunteers" withdrawal plan immediately if Soviet Russia comes into line and accepts all points of the formula and France closes her Pyrenees frontier.

It was understood, without confirmation, that Mussolini in his new proposal suggested the presence of Italian volunteers in Spain should not impede consummation of the pact so long as they do not participate in fighting. They will remain in Spain, Il Duce said, to counteract any fresh intervention in favor of the loyalists.

Lucknow, India, June 17 (AP).—A wave of cholera, one of the most dangerous epidemic diseases, swept over large areas of India today while modern medicine and sanitation under British authorities fought against ancient religious practices mixed with superstition.

An estimated 16,500 persons already have died in the united provinces during the seven-week scourge.

It is an old Hindu custom that bodies of cholera, snakebite and smallpox victims must be dumped into water and be neither buried nor burned. Water is the greatest single carrier of the disease.

France Passes Law for Total Mobilization

Daladier Then Kills Left 'Revolt' by Sending Parliament Home.

By the United Press.

Paris, June 17.—Premier Daladier today dismissed Parliament, seven days before its scheduled adjournment, until November, to smash a revolt of militant Leftist Deputies demanding the Pyrenees frontier be thrown open to arms shipments for loyalist Spain.

Ignoring Socialist protests in what many described as a "moral rupture of the Popular Front," Daladier personally read his decree to the quarreling deputies and sent them home.

Until November the Radical-Socialist "strong man" will rule by decree, without interference from Parliament.

Before adjournment the chamber passed the Senate's "mobilization bill" co-ordinating the nation's preparations for war. Plans for the instant mobilization of all national resources will be drawn up immediately by the ministry of defense, headed by Daladier himself.

The mobilization bill provides all members of Parliament of military age must do service. No provision was made for their fulfillment of parliamentary duties although the Senate sought to amend the article to provide furloughs for mobilized members to attend sessions.

Howard is secretary of John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization, while Baker has retained a close connection with the American Federation of Labor.

Want to Get Away From It All, Indians Plead to Government

By the Associated Press.

A group of "homesick" Oklahoma Indians asked the Federal Government yesterday to help them to run away from "civilization."

They explained they were tired of trying to get along in a white man's world and wanted to return to the simple ways of their ancestors.

They proposed to do this by moving to some secluded spot, abounding in game and fish and forests.

Jack Gouge, a Creek Indian from Hanna, Okla., and the leader of the delegation, told John Collier, Indian Commissioner, about 4,000 Indians—all full-bloods—were prepared to join the "migration."

All they asked of the Government was the land—a land they would make into a "happy hunting ground."

Collier said he was entirely "sympathetic" but the matter was one for Congress. He explained to Gouge that there was no such land available on present reservations.

After the conference, Collier said he believed the Indians would be better off away from the white people.

In the past he has blamed white people for many of the "bad habits"—drinking among them—acquired by the Indians.

Accompanying Gouge to Washington were his fellow townsmen, Archie Simpson and John Proctor, of Hanna, Okla.; Timmie Wolf, of Holdenville, Okla., and Dan Yahola, of Yutomka, Okla. All are members of the Creek tribe.

Gouge said the group that wished to go into seclusion were members of the Creek, Choctaw, Chickasaw and Cherokee tribes.

Sen. Copeland Expires After Collapse and Brief Illness

Wife at Bedside When End Comes

New Yorker Was Health Writer; Parran Laments Passing.

Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, who so often warned his colleagues of the dangers of overwork, died at 7:45 p. m. yesterday at his Shoreham Hotel apartment after a brief illness.

Death was attributed to "a general circulatory collapse complicated by a kidney ailment." He was 69.

His physician, Dr. Harry Kaufman, said the Senator who was also a physician had "driven himself too hard" during the session of Congress ended Thursday night and had insisted upon working "when he should have been in bed resting." Friends pointed out that he had served on eight conference committees near the close of the session.

Wife Is at Bedside.

Senator Copeland was the second member of the Seventy-fifth Congress to die within 24 hours of its adjournment. Representative Allard H. Gasque (Democrat), South Carolina, died early yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital.

Mrs. Copeland, two physicians and two nurses were with the New York senior Senator when he died. Although his death was unexpected, Dr. Kaufman said "the Senator hasn't really been well in a long time."

He had been confined to his apartment since he collapsed on the Senate floor during debate on the flood control bill Wednesday. Mrs. Copeland had come from New York on learning of his illness, though at first it was not considered serious.

Suffering from shock, Mrs. Copeland was placed under a physician's care.

Col. Chester W. Jurney, Senate sergeant-at-arms, said the body would leave Washington today at 10 p. m. for funeral services at the family's Suffern, N. Y., home Tuesday. Burial will be at a nearby cemetery, he said.

According to custom, Vice President Garner and Speaker Bankhead will name a joint committee to accompany the body and to attend the funeral. Garner, who left Washington Thursday night, will make the appointment from his Uvalde, Tex., home.

Known for Writings.

Senator Copeland was nationally known not only as a long-time member of the upper house of Congress, but as well for his writings and broadcasts on health problems. In addition, Copeland was author of "Refraction," a textbook, and "The Health Book," which treated of medicine for the laity.

Instinctively conservative, he broke with the New Deal early in the Roosevelt Administration, lashed out at his own church for "improper activity in behalf of prohibition, gave the C. I. O. tongue lashing when C. I. O. support seemed politically desirable. His disagreement with the New Deal was climaxed

C. I. O. Lawyer Terms Hague In Contempt

Ernst Asks U. S. Court to Punish Jersey City Mayor.

By the Associated Press.

Newark, N. J., June 17.—Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City was charged with contempt of the United States District Court today by Morris L. Ernst, counsel for the C. I. O. and American Civil Liberties Union in their 'free speech" injunction suit against him.

At the accuser's suggestion, Judge William Clark withheld his ruling pending the filing of supporting affidavits and a brief. Judge Clark adjourned the trial until Tuesday morning and set Monday at noon for argument on the validity of defense subpenas served on Ernst and other A. C. L. U. leaders and State C. I. O. Director William J. Carney.

Made Attack at Recess.

The contempt charge was made because Hague, at a hastily called press conference during the noon recess, made an attack on Ernst he was forbidden to make on the witness stand.

The vice chairman of the National Democratic Committee, banging his fist an on anteroom table, shouted that Ernst was responsible for stopping a New York legislative committee from investigating radical influences in the public schools of that State.

As soon as court reconvened, Ernst—previously accused by Hague of instigating a C. I. O.-Communist plot to seize control of the United States, and subjected to continual personal attacks by Hague's counsel—asked Judge Clark to hold Hague in contempt for talking out of court.

Hague Makes Apology.

"That statement," Ernst told the judge, "accuses me, a member of the bar, of having wrecked a Senatorial investigation committee of New York. That means that I, not a member of the Legislature, was instrumental—and only by nefarious means would it have been possible—of calling off all or the majority of the members of a legislative committee."

"If I have offended the court, I want to apologize," said Hague, bowing his head to the judge. "I done it with no intention of offending the court."

Personalities Stricken.

Earlier, a protest by Ernst against attacks on his character, integrity and professional standing by Hague's special counsel, John A. Matthews, of Newark, led Judge Clark to strike all personalities from the record of the 11-day-old trial.

The court warned counsel—particularly Matthews, a divorce court judge—to stop calling names.

Hague testified today that, in carrying on his self-styled "war on Reds and radicals," he had contacted police departments all over the country to obtain information on the C. I. O. and labor discord and had combed newspapers and studied laws, court rulings, official reports and all other available data on what he called "this C. I. O., Red uprising."

Army Transfers District Engineer

The War Department yesterday issued orders transferring Maj. Walter D. Luplow, Army district engineer here, to duty in the intelligence division of the office of Gen. Malin Craig, Chief of Staff.

For 16 months as district engineer, Maj. Luplow has been in charge of the National Capital's water supply, protection of the city from floods, development of Anacostia Park upstream from Benning road northeast and dredging operations in Washington harbor.

Maj. Luplow, to whom news of his transfer was "a complete surprise like a bolt out of the blue," announced that preliminary work for the first unit of the Washington Channel waterfront improvement project had been completed and that similar preparation for the second section would be finished by July 1.

52 Typhoid Cases, 6 Deaths Laid to Cafe at Bus Stop

A little restaurant near Angola, Ind., was revealed yesterday as an inn of death for cross-country bus passengers who stopped there for food.

The Public Health Service reported that information from the Indiana State Board of Health stated that 52 cases of typhoid fever and six deaths had been traced to the place. Most of the cases occurred in Indiana, Ohio, New York and Illinois, with two in California.

Contaminated well water used by the restaurant was responsible. All of the cases occurred in April. Use of the polluted water supply was stopped by the local health officer in the latter part of that month.

Sen. Copeland Expires at 69 Of Brief Illness After Collapse

by bitter opposition to the President's court reform program.

During the court reform fight in the Senate last summer, Senator Copeland turned Dr. Copeland long enough to warn his colleagues against unusual exertion in the Capital's intense heat. Not long before the unexpected death of Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, Copeland warned him that the strain would prove too much for him.

Gov. Lehman Shocked.

News of the New Yorker's death brought immediate expressions of regret from State and national leaders in politics and medicine.

President Roosevelt, at Nahant, Mass., for the wedding of his youngest son, telegraphed Mrs. Copeland: "We have been greatly shocked to hear of the Senator's sudden death. Mrs. Roosevelt joins me in sending to you our very deep sympathy."

Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, of New York, was "inexpressibly shocked." "Senator Copeland," he said at Albany, "served his city, State and nation more than 20 years with great devotion. I have no doubt but that the strain and continuous work which he carried on at the Congressional session which has just ended hastened his death.

"I extend my utmost sympathy to his family."

Gov. Lehman last night declined to discuss plans for appointing a successor to the Senator. It was pointed out that since the Congress has adjourned there may be no need for haste and that the successor can be chosen in the November election, when New York will elect another Senator, due to Senator Wagner being up for re-election this year.

Senator Wagner expressed himself as "heart-broken."

"Only the other day," Wagner said, "I saw that he was dreadfully tired and I pleaded with him to take a little rest. He had served on eight different conference committees in the closing days of Congress—one of them working on a food and drug bill that was one of the dreams of his life.

"He had been fighting for that bill for five years, and he said he must go on and finish his work.

"I regarded him as a great and loyal American—a man with the courage of his convictions. He had unusual courage and, of course, unblemished character. He was faithful to his principles and to his people. I am heartbroken."

Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia, whose relations with the Administration, especially on fiscal matters, have not always been cordial, said: "Senator Copeland was one of the most useful and hardest working members of the body. His death is a blow to the Senate and to the country."

Chairman Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona, of the Senate Judiciary Committee, who attended the University of Michigan when Copeland was mayor of Ann Arbor, said: "I am inexpressibly shocked. He was a very high-minded man, and one of the finest Senators who ever served. His death is a real loss to the country, to his party and to his people. He was courageous and a man of outstanding character and ability."

From Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, came the comment: "He was a true patriot. His death is a great loss to the Nation."

LaGuardia Grieved.

Mayor Fiorella H. LaGuardia of New York City said: "I am shocked and grieved. He and I served together in the New York City government a number of years ago. Despite what may have seemed certain differences, he and I remained good friends. My sympathy goes out to Mrs. Copeland."

The senior New York Senator vigorously attacked the LaGuardia administration in primary campaign speeches last fall, and for a time sought to weld Republican and Democratic forces behind himself in opposition to the fiery little fusion mayor.

"I am shocked," said former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, "at the sudden death of Senator Copeland. He was one of my oldest friends in politics, and his loss will be equally felt by the Senate and the people of New York."

Regret at the death of "one who contributed so much to the health of a nation" was expressed by Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the United States.

"In many fields, and notably that of medicine and public health, Senator Copeland distinguished himself and did much for his city, State and country," Dr. Parran said.

"At the session of Congress just over he fostered legislation creating the National Cancer Institute, setting up a Nation-wide disease program and tackling stream pollution. He sponsored the food and drug reform bill, which was passed recently."

Postmaster General James A. Farley, who threatened Copeland with Administration opposition in 1934, said "I was terribly shocked when I learned of the sudden death of Senator Copeland." He was in Boston with Mrs. Farley to attend the wedding of John Roosevelt to Anne Lindsay Clark.

"I was in communication with him last evening before the Senate adjourned. I had no idea he was ill.

"Senator Copeland has been an outstanding citizen of New York City and State for many years. We have been close personal friends for 20 years. In his passing the State and country lose the services of an honest and intelligent public official. Mrs. Farley joins me in extending sympathy to Mrs. Copeland and the family."

Though he represented the most cosmopolitan State in the Union, a State which contains the Nation's most densely populated city, Dr. Copeland was a son of the soil. He was born on a farm near Dexter, Mich., November 7, 1868.

After graduation, an interneship in the University of Michigan Hospital and post-graduate work in England, France, Germany and Switzerland, Dr. Copeland engaged in general medical practice at Bay City, Mich., for five years.

In 1918 Hylan made him commissioner of health of New York City, a post he was to fill five years. During his service as health commissioner, the influenza epidemic gripped Europe, moved across to America and claimed, almost as many lives as did the war itself.

Dr. Copeland's first six years in the Senate, from 1922 to 1928, saw the physician standing constantly in the politician's shoes. He aided materially in measures looking to the exclusion of Canadian milk and the insistence that Canadian dairy products conform to the high standards required of those originating in the United States.

Pure food legislation engaged his attention early in his 14 years of service, an interest which was crystallized in the Copeland-Lea Pure Food and Drug bill, enacted at this session.

His relations with the New Deal, which pulled his party back to power in 1932 after 12 years of national impotence, have been anything but cordial. Although he was elected to his second term in the Senate in 1928, with Franklin D. Roosevelt his running mate on the Democratic ticket for Governor of New York, he has been definitely cool to Roosevelt policies in national government.

Copeland himself in 1937 ascribed his open break with the White House in 1934 to his successful leadership in the Senate of a revolt which ended in rejection of President Roosevelt's veto of the revised independent offices appropriation bill in March of that year.

He was chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee and a member of the Committee on Appropriations, District of Columbia, Education and Labor, Immigration and Rules. In addition, he served as chairman of a special committee to investigate conditions in the Merchant Marine.

Dr. Copeland was married July 15, 1908, to Miss Frances Spalding, of Ann Arbor, who survives. Their only son, Royal S. Copeland, jr., of New York, also survives.

He was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity, the New York Athletic Club, the National Democratic Club, the Transportation Club, the Sons of the American Revolution, Knights Templar, and the Shrine.

Political Questions Raised.

Death of Senator Copeland, requiring election of two Senators from New York next November, last night centered speculation here on intentions of Gov. Herbert Lehman of that State. New Deal forces are expected to have a candidate to succeed Senator Copeland, but if Gov. Lehman should run for the Senate, the New Dealers were expected to name one of their own to seek the governorship. If Senator Wagner, however, should be induced to run for the governorship, the liberals would seek to replace him in the Senate with an Administration supporter.

Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson, Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins, and Mayor F. H. LaGuardia were being mentioned in connection with these possible developments.

Corcoran Team Maps New PWA Power Policy

Studies Pledge Not to Loan for Competition With 'Fair' Utilities.

By the Associated Press.

The noted team of Corcoran and Cohen was hard at work yesterday trying to rescue the Administration from a power policy snarl threatening to delay $56,780,026 worth of PWA projects.

The job entrusted to the two young Roosevelt admirers, Thomas G. Corcoran and Benjamin V. Cohen, is full of political dynamite. It arises, according to inner circle informants, from a recent fight on the floor of the Senate.

Critics of PWA power policy tried to write into the PWA act of 1938 a restriction against use of Federal funds to build municipal power systems which would compete with existing private plants.

PWA Disappointed.

The attempt failed, but only after Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky had made a promise. He said the Administration positively would not permit such use of funds unless the private plants refused to accept fair and reasonable offers to sell their properties to public agencies. Barkley indicated this was straight from headquarters.

After he spoke, the act was passed without such restrictions. So far as the law is concerned, PWA may strike out with a free hand in any direction, making loans and grants by the millions for public power systems which would parallel private utility property.

Privately some PWA officials want to do that very thing. They still are angry at private companies for blocking their first public power program for months by means of lawsuits. They display urgent applications from municipalities for new loans and grants. They have extensive legal and engineering staffs primed for action.

New Power Policy Basis.

But, directly across their path, lies the Barkley statement of policy. PWA officials express dissatisfaction with it, but in view of it, they indicate they have delayed 49 public power projects entailing expenditures of more than $56,000,000.

At this point, Corcoran and Cohen step in. These twin entrepreneurs of many New Deal innovations have the task of reconciling Barkley's declaration with PWA desires.

In the words of one official, they must find a formula for determining what constitutes a "fair and reasonable" offer for a private power property. They must determine procedure by which municipalities may make such offers and how they may be tested for fairness and reasonability.

It is indicated that if they arrive at a satisfactory formula, it may be made one basis of a new Presidential pronouncement on national power policy.

Hazen Transmits $44,093 as Profit On Birthday Ball

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday sent to the White House a check for $44,093.30, representing net receipts of the District celebration of the President's Birthday Ball.

In the letter of transmittal, Hazen, who acted as general chairman of the celebration, said this amount did not include local contributions to the so-called "March of Dimes."

He commended Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, who acted as executive vice chairman of the celebration.

The complete birthday ball audit, prepared by Keech, follows:

Ball tickets, $25,470; donations, $1,171.97; program, $4,650.50; gold plate breakfast, $1,985; basketball games, $342; Washington Bridge League, $117; dances, $171; Fort Myer horse show, $4,468.22; Government Printing Office, $1,004.45; boxing bouts, $960.07; National Theater show, $2,036.50; bowling tournament, $372; National Capital Kennel Club, $75; founder's certificates, $1,582; Miss Marie Gambarelli, $40, and Ironworkers Union, D. C., $100.

Total receipts were $50,836.71 from which was deducted $6,743.41 for expenditures.

Coal Commission Will Study Prices

By the Associated Press

The Coal Commission announced yesterday it would conduct preliminary minimum price hearings here July 6 on the cost of producing soft coal in the Appalachian section.

Information developed at the hearings, the commission said, will be used as a basis in re-establishing minimum prices for the industry. The commission said district boards would submit the following figures as their ideas what it cost to produce a ton of coal in 1936:

District 1, central Pennsylvania, northeastern West Virginia and western Maryland, $2.39; District 2, western Pennsylvcania, $2.29; District 3, northern West Virginia, $1.87; District 4, Ohio, $1.97; District 5, Michigan, $3.56; District 6, northern West Virginia panhandle, $2.01; District 7, southeastern West Virginia and Virginia, $2.20; District 8, southwestern West Virginia, eastern Kentucky, Northeastern Tennessee and the western part of Virginia, $2.05.

Senators to Go Limit in Vote Fraud Inquiry

Campaign

ton (Democrat), of Indiana, of the Senate Lobby Committee, denied a $12,500 supplementary appropriation by the Senate Friday, said he would merely "keep his organization together" with small funds remaining. Minton said he had no plans this summer for a threatened investigation of newspapers or any other definite plans for an inquiry.

To Follow Up Every Charge.

Chairman Sheppard, lone "100 per cent" New Dealer on the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, said the committee moved swiftly because "our best use will as a deterrent" to the misuse of funds. He said the committee would "follow up every charge" and "take the initiative" where evidence was available. He called another organization meeting of the committee for Friday, announced plans to remain here all summer, and ordered the preparation of sharply phrased questionnaires to be sent to all candidates.

Senator Walsh, who had expressed the fear on the floor that little would come of the investigation because of the loose phrasing of the resolution, lost little time in urging the committee to affirmative action.

His own resolution accepted by the committee said its "objective is simple and clear—the maintenance of the integrity of the elective processes, the preservation of Democracy at its most vital point—the ballot box, the free exercise of the voting franchise, and to that end the prevention of any improper use of money and of any coercion or intimidation by any person, group or agency, outside or inside the Government."

Outgrowth of a resolution by Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, backed by nine other Senate Democrats and aimed at "politics in relief," the broadened powers of the campaign expenditures group were agreed to after leaders refused to assent to a separate relief investigation.

Skepticism Voiced.

Three times the Senate had defeated a statutory ban on the political use of relief funds Skepticism was expressed on the Senate floor on the "compromise"—Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, declaring it was only "fooling the people," and Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, calling it "locking the door after the horse is stolen."

But in adopting the Walsh statement, the committeee yesterday gave a "broad construction" to the language of the compromise resolution. They agreed to "follow the spirit as well as its letter, and to make full use of the power and authority vested in it, without fear or favor and without partisanship. Any other course would be to fail to measure up to the obligation imposed by the Senate upon the committee and subject them to the charge of indifference toward honest and clean elections."

The committee declared it "intends to fully carry out with vigor and vigilance the mandate of the Senate to achieve the purpose and objective which was sought by the resolution."

Walsh Warning Quoted.

In warning that "all Government agencies must keep clear of all primary and election campaigns," the Walsh resolution added:

"Any other course, in the judgment of the committee, would amount in reality to the use of Federal funds to influence votes, and under the terms of the Senate resolution would require investigation and censure, and is to be exposed, condemned and prevented insofar as it is within the power of this committee to do so.

"The committee gives warning now to all candidates for Senatorial office, their friends and aids, that any violation or attempted violation of the law pertaining to the conduct of the campaign and the conduct of the election, indeed any improper conduct whatsoever, will invite investigation by this committe , and if found to have occurred will be fully exposed and publicized with a view to criminal prosecution through appropriate channels, if such is warranted."

Vote Is Unanimous.

All were present at the meeting except Senator White, and the vote for the Walsh statement was unanimous.

Meanwhile, Congressional membership on the $500,000 monopoly investigating committee was completed, when Speaker Bankhead named Chairman Sumners, of the House Judiciary Committee; Representative Eicher (Democrat), of Iowa, and Representative Reece (Republican), of Tennessee, as House members. Vice President Garner previously had appointed Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, who sponsored the monopoly investigation resolution; Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, and Senator Borah (Republican), of Utah, as Senate members. Representatives of the Federal Trade Commission, Securities and Exchange Commission and the Justice, Commerce, Treasury and Labor Departments will complete the 12-man committee.

Sumners Considers Post.

The investigation of monopolies, with a view to legislation, was asked by the President in a special message. Representative Sumners was still considering whether he would accept appointment. He told the House Thursday that "there is a chance for this joint effort to have a far-reaching, helpful influence."

Named chairman of a special committee to investigate the Nation's phosphate reserves, Senator Pope (Democrat), of Idaho, scheduled opening hearings this morning, with Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Dr. Harcourt Morgan, of the TVA, and representatives of other Government agencies on the stand. The committee will go to Idaho, with its vast phosphate resources, in July, and in the fall to Florida, now leading in phosphate exports. Besides Pope, those named to the committee include Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, and Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, and Representatives Peterson, of Florida, and Leavy, of Washington (Democrats), and Case (Republican), of South Dakota.

Appointed by the Vice President to a special Senate committee to study tax-exempt securities and Federal-State salaries were Senator Brown, of Michigan, and Byrd, of Virginia (Democrats), representing the Senate Finance Committee, and Senators Logan, of Kentucky, and McGill, of Kansas (Democrats), and Austin (Republican), of Vermont, representing the Judiciary Committee. This committee will study the question raised by the President in his mesage asking an end to tax exemptions.

To Wait Until Election.

Representative Cooper (Democrat), of Tennessee, ranking member of the special House tax subcommittee, said his group probably would remain inactive until after the November elections, but indicated both the question of tax exemptions and means of financing farm parity price payments would be studied later.

Appointed by the Speaker yesterday to the House Campaign Expenditures Committee were Representative Lewis, Colorado; DeRouen, Louisiana; O'Malley, Wisconsin; Kramer, California; O'Toole, New York (Democrats), and Hancock, of New York, and Michener, of Michigan (Republicans).

Other Congressional investigations and funds authorized are $60,000 for the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, $100,000 for the joint TVA investigation, $25,000 for the Senate (Bailey) investigation of costs and prices in interstate commerce, $20,000 for the Senate (Copeland) investigation of subversive activities in the merchant marine, $30,000 for the Senate (Vandenberg) investigation of industrial profit-sharing plans, $2,500 for the Senate (Ellender) Civil Service investigation, $5,000 for the Senate (Bulkley) economic co-operation inquiry; $25,000 for the House (Dies) investigation of un-American activities, $1,500 for the Senate investigation of wool produce and marketing, and $898 for the Senate Agriculture Committee investigation of parity prices and parity income for farmers.

On Capitol Hill

House Has an Admiral, Colonel, Commodore, Major, Sheriff, All in One.

"'Who knows,' said he, 'when a war might come?"

"Boom! Boom! Boom!"

The international situation being what it is, William T. Roy, assistant parliamentarian of the House, is the most prepared man we know.

He boasts a string of honorary military and naval titles a yard long and yesterday a new one was added—Commodore of the Texas Navy. It was bestowed by Gov. James V. Allred.

MAJ. ROY.

With a desk in Speaker Bankhead's office, Roy at one time or other has met most of the Nation's notables going or coming, and his long list of honorary commissions is one result.

Besides being a colonel on the staff of Kentucky's governor and a Texas commodore, he is an admiral in the Nebraska Navy and a fullfledged deputy sheriff.

And—we almost forgot—he is a major in the National Guard.

* * * *

Just who won the annual scramble for Speaker Bankhead's battered gavel, after it beat the session's last tattoo at 9:09 p. m. Thursday, remained a deep mystery—until yesterday.

Nimble Representative Dingell (Democrat), of Michigan, proudly exhibited the prize. He won the foot race over scurrying page boys and less fleet-footed colleagues.

Speaker Bankhead? Well, he isn't worrying. He has lots more like it. Besides, it wasn't the gavel he had used most of the session.

It was revealed yesterday that Representative John Lesinski, of Dearborn, Mich., had married Miss Estelle Julia Geisinger, one of his secretaries, who also is from Dearborn. They were married by the Rev. John F. Kociela at Fairfax June 11.

Lesinski, a widower, has served six years in the House. Mrs. Lesinski is secretary of the House Committee on Invalid Pensions, of which he is chairman. They left early yesterday for Dearborn.

Representative Roy (Democrat), of New Hampshire, balanced his accounts yesterday and discovered he had earned $2,857.14 a day for the seven days he served in the House this session, the Associated Press said.

Roy, who was seated June 9 after successfully contesting the election of Arthur B. Jenks (Republican), found his experience as a member of Congress "very nice" (with a slight French accent). He got paid for the entire term.

It was revealed that Congress adjourned without acting on a request from the Tennessee Valley Authority Investigating Committee for more money.

The resolution which created the committee provided $50,000 for the inquiry, but the investigators asked for an additional $100,000. Their request received House approval, but lost out in the Senate in the last-minute rush.

Another Capital tradition will have to be discarded, following an interview given by Vice President Garner.

The Vice President declared:

"I have not played poker in the District of Columbia for nearly 18 years. The only times I have played elsewhere have been very rare occasions."

Thereby goes another popular belief—that the Texan had won a reputation as one of the best poker players in the Capital. It has been as closely associated with the Vice President in the public mind as the "branch water" he so frequently calls for.

McNary, Snell Flay Congress' Spending Peak

Spend

WPA relief rolls, now around 2,600,000.

McNary and Snell estimated the Nation's jobless at 13,000,000. They declared that "with the Nation in the throes of a severe economic crisis, which daily grows worse, the New Deal Congress, by its adjournment at this time, has abandoned its obligation to the American people.

"Bitter Fulfillment."

Accusing Administration leaders of trying to "change the American form of Government" and declaring their "warnings of the dangers inherent in many New Deal policies have been ignored or ridiculed," they said:

"It is with the keenest regret and aversion that we now witness a bitter fulfillment of the warnings we have issued. The planned Roosevelt recovery has, as we warned, become the Roosevelt depression."

The McNary-Snell statement said that "this disastrous state of affairs" could have been avoided had New Deal leaders "accepted the remedial measures proposed, especially during the last 18 months, by the Republicans of House and Senate."

"Instead," they said, "the time of Congress has been dissipated in determined efforts by Administration leaders to change the American form of Government through Supreme Court packing and so-called Government reorganization schemes. Stubbornly the President and his advisers have refused to admit the error of their policies, even as the house of cards they built falls apart around them."

G. O. P. Measures Detailed.

Detailing Republican measures for outright repeal of the undivided profits tax, budget balancing, return of relief administration to the States, revision of the social security act, modification of the labor-relations act and divorcing Government from business, they said Republicans had fought such "New Deal policies as have strangled business, discouraged private investment and thus decreased opportunities for employment."

"In brief," they concluded, "the Republicans of House and Senate have fought to bring about a sound, lasting revival of American industry and business, believing this is the only means whereby farmers can find markets at fair prices for their crops, workers jobs at living wages and consumers a better standard of living."

Representative Taber's assault was narrowed to the spending front. Reciting in detail the session's outlays, he charged that "we are facing a deficit of approximately $7,000,000,000 to $8,000,000,000 and a public debt of approximately $45,000,000,000 at the end of the fiscal year 1939."

Following is his table of appropriations by Congresses since 1931:

Cong.	Sess.	Yr.	Amount.
71	3	1931	14,983,250,949.98
72	1	1932	4,827,440,936.33

HanesProposes 'Partnership' to End Recession

Co-operation of Business and Labor With Government His Plea.

By the United Press.

Cambridge, Mass., June 17.—John W. Hanes, securities and exchange commissioner, tonight called upon business and labor to co-operate with the Government in attempts to restore economic recovery and social stablity and preserve democracy in the United States.

Addressing the Harvard Business School Alumni Association, he said that what had been "reverently called the grand old days of laissez-faire" were gone forever and there was a national need for tolerant co-operation among all elements of society.

Referring to widespread unemployment and record relief rolls as the "industrial impoverishment" of America, Hanes said the interdependent nature of the national economy made operation of the Nation a partnership.

Fair Distribution Urged.

"Without fair distribution of responsibilities and awards, no partnership can last," he said. "No member of any partnership can take it out of the next fellow for very long and get away with it."

Hanes, who recently induced 16 of the Nation's top-flight industrialists and bankers to offer President Roosevelt conditional co-operation in his recovery drive, is reported scheduled to become an Assistant Secretary of Treasury within a few months.

He said that in the production and distribution of the national income, private enterprise had the primary, and Government the supplementary, role.

"Each should and must discharge its responsibilities with due regard for the function of the other," he added. "If capital cannot earn its keep, it is natural to expect that it will stop flowing into industry which, for a society such as ours, would be fatal."

Cites Leaders' Attitudes.

He cited recent speeches of John L. Lewis, chairman, of the Committee for Industrial Organization; when William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and Myron C. Taylor, former chairman of the United States Steel Board, in which each urged co-operation of business and labor.

"To all of us, democracy is as necessary as air; we cannot and will not live in another society," Hanes said. "But unlike air, democracy cannot be taken for granted; we must dedicate ourselves anew to the purposes of democratic life, realizing fully our responsibilities as well as our rights."

The aim of the present Administration, he said, is to raise the farmer's income, encourage building-trade revival, improve the tax structure and remove some of the inequities of the tax burden on business and industry, increase wages of the lowest-paid industrial workers, provide temporary work relief and make working capital available to large and small business that cannot readily obtain it in the open market.

Warns of Rail Ruin.

Boston, June 17 (AP).—Commissioner Joseph B. Eastman, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, today urged that "warring factions" be broughtinto line under one "responsible leadership" to save the railroad industry from ruin.

"It is the duty of the Government to accomplish this result," Eastman told the Harvard Business School Alumni Association.

Describing the railroads as "desperately sick, financially speaking," Eastman said that employes, security holders, shippers and the Government "must put their shoulders to the wheel."

"On the other hand," he added, "if all these interests continue to divide themselves into warring camps, they will most certainly bring ruin to the industry."

Survivor of Crash In Jungle Prefers Being Ill at Home

Paul W. Murphy, amateur actor, prefers a sick bed at his home, 424 Crittenden street northwest, to airplane crashes in Mexican jungles, fighting off hordes of lizards or being hauled, half conscious, through Central American jungles on Indian burros.

Murphy has tried all these in the last three weeks. He arrived in Washington Tuesday, ready to spend the next two weeks under a doctor's care, nursing injured ligaments in his back.

On June 3 he took off for a six-hour airplane trip from Ocupulco, in southern Mexico, to Oaxaca City. After four hours the ship crashed, two men were killed and two others critically injured. When Murphy regained consciousness, he fought off hundreds of lizards, attracted by the smell of fresh blood.

Finally rescued by Indians, he witnessed a minor earthquake in a native village, and a small train wreck before he reached Mexico City. From there the Mexican Red Cross sent him to Vera Cruz, and then to New York City.

Horse Dream Pays Visionary $4,304

Detroit, June 17 (U.P.).—R. J. Dice, who likes to play the races occasionally, was sitting in an easy chair last night musing on today's entries when he observed the flickering light of a baseburner reflecting against a vase. The light seemed to form the figures "9" and "1."

Dice went to the Fair Grounds track today and put his $2 in the daily double on the No. 9 horse in the first race and the No. 1 horse in the second.

They came in, and Dice won $4,304, the largest daily double payoff in Detroit turf history.

Fresh from their junior years in 15 eastern colleges, 400 students arrived yesterday at Fort Meade, Md., for a six-week course in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps.

Although formal instruction under Army officers does not start until 5:45 a. m. Monday, the youths had a taste of army routine as they registered, were assigned tents, given physical examinations, issued equipment and clothes and told to: "Go into dressing room and put on your own underwear and the following Government clothing: one pair of socks, one shirt, one pair of breeches, 1 pair of shoes and one service hat. Do not put on any other Government clothing. You must dress in ten minutes."

Routine Is Described.

For the next six weeks the week days will start at 5:45 a. m. and Sundays and holidays at 6:45. After breakfast 15 minutes later, camp will be policed and the day's drills will start at 7 a. m. Week days, except Wednesdays and Saturdays, the boys will be in the field seven hours a day. Wednesdays and Saturdays work will stop at the 12:15 p. m. mess.

For the first week there will be drill and command for an hour each morning, demonstration of platoon in attack, demonstration of light tanks, development of offensive attack, scouting and patroling, chemical warfare, inspection of stables and rifle shooting.

Contests will be arranged later in all phases of instruction, and prizes awarded.

Sports to be Provided.

The camp will have its lighter side. Equipment will be issued for soft and volley ball and horse-shoe pitching, and company teams will be organized for golf, boxing and tennis.

There will be a dance every Friday night, chaperoned by a hostess and the officers. Miss Helen Lee Pfeiffer of Washington, will be the official hostess.

A behind-the-scenes difference of opinion by staff officers developed over the question of serving beer at the post. The decision late yesterday, however, was that only soft drinks would be served.

Staff Officers in Charge.

Staff officers under Col. A. S. Williams, executive officer, are Col. J. S. Leonard, in charge of training, assisted by Maj. Stonewall Jackson, Maj. S. D. Hervey and Maj. Winfield Shrum; Maj. George R. Hedge, adjutant; Maj. G. E. Abram, supply officer, and Capt. E. Watkins, mess officer.

The boys are from Georgetown University, University of Maryland, Johns Hopkins, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Virginia Military Institute, Lafayette College, Pennsylvania Military College, University of Nebraska, Drexel Institute, Pennsylvania State College, University of Pennsylvania, Lehigh University, Valley Forge, Western Maryland and Gettysburg College.

Two Children Hit By Automobiles; 1 Driver Accused

Two children were injured, one seriously, in traffic accidents in Washington yesterday.

Five-year-old Mildred Ann Bailey, 1733 Trinidad avenue northeast, suffered fractures of both legs when she was struck by a grocery truck, operated, the police said, by George B. Zentgraf, 40, of the 3100 block Channing street northeast.

Zentgraf was charged with reckless driving.

George Knapp, 3, of 234 Third street northwest, suffered head bruises when he was struck by a car on Third street between Constitution avenue and C street northwest.

Cleveland Clients Demonstrating as ReliefCrisisGrows

Cleveland, June 17, (AP).—Renewed unrest among hungry clients and a demonstration by unpaid administrative workers accentuated Cleveland's relief crisis today.

At a district office, a crowd estimated at 200 relief clients excitedly shouted: "We want food." A group of 68 union relief employes clumped through the city hall in their lunch hour, protesting a month of "payless pay days."

New Chain Bridge Dedicated With Address of Senator Glass

clogged with traffic for almost an hour before the Rev. Walter F. Cunningham, pastor of Holy Trinity Church, pronounced the invocation. By the time the Washington Gas Light Employes' Band had played the "Star-Spangled Banner," the roped-off square at the District end of the bridge was packed with men, women and children, who sat erect in the hot sun.

Span Part of Model City.

Besides Senator Glass, distinguished guests introduced by Chairman George C. Shinn included Capt. H. C. Whitehurst asnd former Representative Thomas Blanton, of Texas.

Enginering highlights of the new steel and concrete span were described by Col. Dan I. Sultan. He called attention to the beauty of the design of the 1,351-foot bridge, with its 30-foot wide roadway, built to thwart the floods and the ravages of time that doomed its historic predecessors.

"I would like to have seen the first dedication of a bridge on this site, some 150 more years ago," said Col. Sultan.

The new bridge is in reality hands across the Potomac, joining Virginia and the Nation's Capital, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen asserted in his address.

"Washington is a model city for the world, and now the bridge is part of it," he observed.

Hazen paid tribute to Col. Sultan, and expressed regret that soon he would leave his post here for other duty with the Army.

First Bridge in 1808.

On behalf of the Washington Board of Trade, Francis C. Addison, its president, thanked Congress, the Commissioners and all of the officials who co-operated to make the new span possible.

He stressed the economic importance of the bridge as an artery of traffic between the District and northern Virginia.

"Its value is both economic and social," he said.

Back in the early days of the War Between the States soldiers guarded the northern side of the river, where the bridge now stands, while men in Confederate grey manned field pieces and leaned on muskets across the Potomac, John Clagett Proctor, historian, recalled.

He told of the first bridge called Chain Bridge, erected on the site in 1808, and how it was destroyed by floods two years later, and replaced intermittently until in 1832, when the bridge was taken down and a new one erected of timber, supported by immense chains.

How a new bridge was built in 1840, destroyed and rebuilt in 1852 was sketched by Proctor.

"This bridge served until the one which was removed last autumn was opened to the public in 1874," continued Proctor.

Students Give Dances.

"Northern Virginia and the District thus are even closer linked economically," said Representative Smith.

He expressed the appreciation of Virginians to Col. Sultan, Capt. Whitehurst and the Commissioners.

Adding an international touch to the occasion, students of the Americanization School, under the direction of Miss Helen Kiernon-Vasa, presented the folk dances of their faraway lands.

On the shores of the Potomac, that resounded to the tread of Indians a century and a half ago, representatives of Germany, Panama, Italy, Czechoslovakia, Russia, Greece, Spain, Holland, Poland, Mexico, Rumania and the Ukraine assembled in native costume.

There were individual dances by Maria Luisa Garzon, of Spain; Manexia Asvestas, of Greece and Mathilde Weber, Gisela Hauser, Rosa Seamann and Karla Visek, of Germany.

Dr. F. Bland Tucker, pastor of St. John's Church, pronounced the benediction.

Then, arrayed in white dresses and armed with tiny scissors, Mary Carroll Seal, 8, daughter of Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal, and Marianne McCarty, 7, daughter of Bernard T. Mcarty, snipped the ribbons and the new Chain Bridge was officially dedicated.

Band Leads March.

With a roar, a police motorcycle escort droned over the bridge, above the rocky Potomac basin banks, buzzed high above the now-docile, muddy stream whose floods doomed old Chain Bridge, and led the procession to the Virginia side.

Leading the line of march was the Kiwanis Club Band, from Arlington County; and there followed American Legion units, civic groups and the line of official cars, in which rode leaders in the celebration and in civic and official life in the District.

Private motorist crept slowly after the procession, and swarms of pedestrians clung close to the sidewalks, and gazed down at the rocks and the river.

On the Virginia side a group of horsemen, headed by 65-year-old Paul Rhinehart, who carried an American flag, greeted the parade in pioneer fashion. The horses of several shied, one young woman was forced to dismount, but Rhinehart held fast to the reins of his steed and waved his flag.

"Welcome to Virginia," he shouted, and then the whir of the motors drowned him out.

Blinking in the late afternoon sun as the dedication ended was Karl Haneke, 90-year-old retired cigar manufacturer, who was present back in 1874, when old Chain Bridge was dedicated.

"I remember, I remember," he repeated, half to himself. "It was a marvel of its times then.

"The horses and the people came from everywhere. The women wore hoopskirts and the men high, stiff collars, and Virginia and Washington weren't on such good terms."

"That's progress. I can see it, because I remember that day 64 years ago."

'Butch' Konoye, Son of Premier, Fails at Princeton

Ridgewood, N. J., June 17 (AP).—Fumitaka Konoye, son of Japan's premier, will not be at Princeton University next Tuesday when diplomas are handed to his fellow members of the class of '38.

"Butch," as the prince is known to his friends, revealed this today after he was eliminated in the quarter-finals of the Metropolitan Amateur golf championship by Frankie Strafaci, of Brooklyn. He said he failed in "all of my majors."

Konoye said he plans to sail for home July 14. He said he hopes his father wouldn't put him "to work," and would permit him to return next year to Princeton.

McCall Is Lodged In 'Death Row' Cell

Raiford, Fla., June 17 (AP).—Franklin Pierce McCall walked into his "death row" cell at Florida State Prison, 20 days after he kidnaped and killed Jimmy Cash. He has been sentenced to die in the electric chair on a date to be set by Gov. Fred Cone, which cannot be before the week of June 27.

McCall, stunned, silent and submissive, was delivered to Superintendent L. F. Chapman today by Dade County deputies, who brought their prisoner here in an automobile. In 15 minutes the confessed kidnaped was booked, stripped, searched, garbed in convict clothes and locked in "a death row" cell.

ICC Approves Reorganization Of Class 1 Road

Washington State Line First to Win Action Under Law of 1933.

By the Associated Press.

The Interstate Commerce Commission adopted yesterday a final plan for reorganization of the Spokane International Railway Co. and Coeur d'Alene & Pend d'Oreille Railway Co.

ICC attaches said it was the first final plan for reorganization of a class one carrier adopted by the commission.

The plan now will be submitted to the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Washington, where the International Railway Co. filed under section 77 of the bankruptcy act in August, 1933.

The reorganization plan provides for cancellation of unsecured claims and the capital stock of the Spokane International and the Coeur d'Alene & Pen d'Oreille.

Existing bonds of the two railroads would be exchanged for new securities. Bondholders of each would receive, in exchange for each $1,000 bond, a $600 new income mortgage bond and six shares of new common stock.

Under the commission's plan contingent interest charges would amount to $128,088 a year.

Bonds of the two railroads outstanding total $4,744,000 with accumulated interest amounting to $1,186,000, making the total amount of debt $5,930,000 as of last January 1.

The commission recommended the plan become effective January 1.

'Once Too Often' Before Judge Nets Drinker Sentence

Phillip Garry, 35, of 1321 M street northwest, yesterday was sentenced to $15 or 15 days for intoxication, by apearing before Judge Walter J. Casey once too often in two days.

When Garry apeared in court, Judge Casey asked him if he had not been there before.

"Yes, your honor; yesterday," Garry replied.

Fix, Facing Trial, Jailed as Drunk

Fix was arrested while on bond awaiting jury trial for assaulting his wife, Mrs. Marian Fix, May 2. Police say Fix tied his wife to a bed in their home, kept her there 24 hours and beat her with wet Turkish towels, burned her with lighted cigarettes and broke her jaw.

Mrs. Fix has stated she would not prosecute her husband, but the District attorney's office plans to press the assault charge.

Fike Joins Wife, Missing for Day

Linus R. Fike, attorney for the Department of Agriculture, left Washington last night to join his wife, Mrs. Marjorie Fike, for whom police had conducted a day-long search.

The search ended yesterday when Mrs. Fike's sister, Mrs. Louise Pearson, told police the missing woman had telephoned to say she had spent the night with friends, and planned to stay out of Washington for several days.

Goebbels Heads Raids on Jews In Berlin 'Oasis'

Refugees Thought Envoys Made Capital Safe, Nazis Declare.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, June 17.—Progaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels himself ordered the raids on Jewish homes and amusement places that have become daily occurrences in Berlin since June 1, a high Nazi source declared tonight.

"Dr. Goebbels learned a constant stream of Jews was descending upon this capital because it was regarded as the only oasis left for Jews," the informant said.

"Rightly or wrongly, the Jews believed the presence here of a large diplomatic corps and so many foreign correspondents constituted a certain safeguard for Jews. . . ."

"Cleanup" Ordered.

"Dr. Goebbels (as Nazi district leader of greater Berlin), was told many homes which housed five or six persons suddenly sheltered 14 or 15. So he ordered Count Wolf Helldorf, chief of Berlin police, to make a thorough investigation and cleanup."

Cafes, restaurants and theaters frequented by Jews, and Jewish homes, have been raided by secret police. It was rumored 1,000 persons were arrested.

[German Jews, panic-stricken by the sweeping anti-semitic crusade, roamed Berlin streets tonight rather than go to their homes where many have been routed from beds and taken away in prison vans, the United Press said.—Editor's note.]

Lights were suddenly turned up in the Alhambra movie theater, in Berlin's exclusive west end, and all Jews present ordered to stand up. They were then taken into custody for examination.

U. S. Visas Sought.

Paulsboerner street, in the west end, was roped off this morning and it was assumed a raid was instituted against the many Jews living there. Police officials did not explain the action.

Nerves of American and British consular officials were tried by repeated pathetic scenes in their offices—nervous breakdowns, suicide threats and outbursts of hysterical weeping.

Applications at the American consulate general for United States visas jumped from a recent daily average of 30 to 130 when unofficial reports of the raids began circulating.

The number of visas granted at the British consulate was estimated at 160 daily. The estimate included Aryan Germans. There was no account of the applications refused.

It was announced the state department for health insurance ruled that hospitals and clinics conducted by Jews would be permitted no longer to treat Aryan members of the state health fund. Aryans could choose previously where they preferred to be treated.

The raids, it was learned from unquestionable sources, were mentioned in the propaganda ministry's daily conference with German editors, but instructions were given not to display reports of them prominently in German newspapers.

A petition to Prime Minister Chamberlain, calling on the British government "to establish a Jewish state encompassing the whole of Palestine," was presented to the British Ambassador yesterday by a delegation including William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, and the Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of the Foundry Methodist Episcopal Church.

Members of the group said Sir Ronald Lindsay expressed sympathy with the aims of the Pro-Palestine Federation of America, an organization of Christians dedicated to relief for victims of oppression abroad.

A petition delivered to the White House by the delegation urged the President to exert pressure on Great Britain to remove restrictions on Jewish immigration into Palestine.

Baltimore, June 17 (AP).—A protest against proposed abandonment by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad of the B. & O. station at Riverdale was filed with the Public Service Commission today by the Engineering and Research Corporation of Washington. Reich Must Pay Austria Debt To U. S., Hull Warns in Note would expect Germany to assume Austria's obligations but Berlin did not reply. Today Hull disclosed that a sharp note was delivered to the Berlin foreign office June 9 by American Ambassador Hugh R. Wilson, reiterating the American position and expressing the hope that "Germany may yet undertake the payments incumbent on it, both under international law and under equity."

Debts

"It is believed that the weight of authority clearly supports the general doctrine of international law founded upon obvious principles of justice that in case of absorption of a state, the substituted sovereign assumes the debts and obligations of the absorbed state, and takes the burdens with the benefits.

Early Reply Asked.

"A few exceptions to this general proposition have some times been asserted, but these exceptions appear to find no application in the circumstances in the instant case. Both the 1930 loan (private loan) and the relief loans (1920) were made in time of peace, for constructive works and the relief of human suffering.

"There appears no reason why American creditors of Austria should be placed in any worse position by reason of the absorption of Austria by Germany than they would have been had such absorption not taken place.

"The United States Government, therefore, while recognizing that the German government is at present engaged in negotiations with numerous governments covering this and related questions, regrets that the service of the loan, affecting many American holders, should have been interrupted, reasserts its own position and requests that as early a reply as possible be made to the note of April 6."

Nazis Charge "Politics."

Minister Funk had charged that international loans made to the former Austria "served a political aim of preventing the union of Germany and Austria." His allegation was echoed in the influential newspaper, National Zeitung of Essen, organ of Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, which declared, "foreign money was systematically used to turn independent Austria into an opponent of the Third Reich."

Hull ignored the imputations.

"The Government of the United States," his note continued, "does not wish to omit on the occasion of the failure of the German government to make the contractural monthly payment due on June 1 on the Austrian loan of 1930, in spite of the express charge which it enjoys on the assets and revenues of Austria taken over by the German government, to state its dissent from the indicated position of the German government as to its legal responsibilities in the premises and to express the hope that Germany may yet undertake the payment incumbent on it, both under international law and under equity."

Amnesiac Identified As Detroit Salesman

Norfolk, Va., June 17 (AP).—A man found wandering on a beach near here last Tuesday, apparently the victim of amnesia, was identified today as Frederick L. Robinson, 29, of Detroit.

Robinson, a bond salesman and son of a former Packard Motor Car Co. treasurer, disappeared from Detroit July 13, 1937.

China May Cut Yangtze Dikes, Flood Hankow

New Council's Reds Are Held Urging Destruction Rather Than Capture.

By the United Press

Shanghai (Saturday), June 18.—Unconfirmed reports were circulated today that members of China's new people's advisory council in Hankow will advocate cutting the dikes of the Yangtze River protecting the provisional capital rather than let it fall into the hands of Japanese.

The Chinese were described as well satisfied with their tactics in cutting the dikes of the mighty Yellow River, despite the fact its floods have destroyed some of the richest farmlands in the nation and reportedly drowned thousands of Chinese, and to feel "flood strategy" may win the war with Japan where guns and men have failed.

Torrential rains were continuing throughout the flooded areas and parts of Shanghai and other Yangtze Valley cities were under water. All experts agreed a major catastrophe, in which hundreds of thousands of Chinese will lose their lives, was at hand.

700,000 Refugees.

[More than 2,000 communities and countless farms already have been evacuated. Japanese army engineers estimated there are now 700,000 Chinese refugees from the flood, the Associated Press said.—Editor's note.]

Other war developments:

In Tokyo Japan rejected a Soviet protest against Japanese aerial bombings of Chinese cities and accused Russia of prolonging the war by supplying airplanes and pilots to China. Russo-Japanese tension had reached dangerous proportions, but the Japanese were confident Russia will not intervene effectively in the China war.

In Hankow the new people's advisory council was inaugurated with Ching-wei, former premier, as president, and Dr. Chang Po-ling, president of Nankai University, which was bombed out of Tientsin by the Japanese early in the war, but reconstituted in Central China, as vice president.

Floods Halt Drive.

The council, which will hold its first meeting July 1, was designed to adjust differences between Gen. Chiang Kai-shek and the Communists and other groups in his all-China anti-Japanese front. The Communists were strongly represented in it and were demanding Hankow be defended to the last and destroyed, if necessary, before being abandoned to the Japanese.

A spokesman for the Chinese war office in Hankow said Japanese drives on the provisional capital both north and south of the Yangtze River were hopelessly bogged down in floods and mud.

Three Japanese divisions were being concentrated at Nanking, capital of Anhwei Province, for the drive on the Kiukiang-Nanchang Railway, guarding the southern approaches to Hankow, but were unable to advance because of the continual torrential rains. Guerrillas were harassing the Japanese rear.

Japan Admits Trouble.

To the north the powerful Japanese armies which earlier this month were sweeping westward in a victorious offensive along the Lunghai Railway, south of the Yellow River, were split into flood-isolated groups by the action of the Chinese in cutting the river's dikes.

[Tsang Tsong-sze, manager of the Bank of Communications and an important figure in Chinese finance, was shot and killed today while walking on a street in the French Concession, the Associated Press said. The unidentified assassin escaped.—Editor's note.]

Arresting Officer Shares Good Luck With Freed Bandit

Leavenworth, Kans., June 17 (AP). The policeman who arrested Roy Gardner 17 years ago was on hand to greet the notorious mail train robber and prison escape artist when he left the Federal Penitentiary here today, a free man.

"Catching Roy got me away from pounding the streets as a policeman," explained Louis Sonney, whose single-handed capture of Gardner at Centralia, Wash., June 16, 1921, was acclaimed.

"It got me to a place where I own a company distributing film out in Los Angeles. He helped me, so I helped him."

Sonney will accompany Gardner back West and assist him in his new ambition to make "legitimate money."

Flier Lands Safely In Flaming Plane

Navy Opposes Canal Across Nicaragua Now

Leahy Suggests More Study of Project as of Great 'Future Consequence.'

The Navy Department yesterday joined four other Government agencies in opposing construction of a canal across Nicaragua at this time. It recommended, however, that the $1,000,000,000 project be studied further.

Admiral William D. Leahy, acting Secretary of the Navy, outlined views of his service in a report to the House Merchant Marine Committee.

"It is the opinion of the Navy Department," he wrote, "that since the measure . . . has not been included in the current budget, and since it involves a matter of great future consequences, studies relative to the project should be continued without further commitment at this time."

State Report Secret.

Similar reports were made by the Commerce and War Departments and the Merchant Marine Commission.

The State Department sent a secret communication on the subject, details of which committee officials refused to divulge. They said, however, that it opposed immediate action.

Representative Izac, of California, had introduced legislation authorizing the Government to begin necessary negotiations toward construction of the waterway. He contended the canal was necessary from a national defense standpoint because the Government had "all its eggs in one basket"—the Panama Canal.

Naval authorities admit that if even one lock in the Panama Canal were destroyed the fleet would have to go around Cape Horn to get from one ocean to the other, adding weeks to the time now required.

Already Surveyed.

The War Department already has surveyed a route for the Nicaraguan Canal from Greytown on the Caribbean, via the San Juan River and Lake Nicaragua, to Brito on the Pacific.

While conceding the canal would have "important advantages," particularly in facilitating mobilization of naval forces in event of war, the department said it probably would not reduce the present sailing time between New York and San Francisco. It would take a ship 25 to 30 hours to pass through the projected canal, in contrast to 7½ to 8½ for the one across the Isthmus of Panama. The Nicaragua waterway would be 175 miles long, while the Panama Canal is only 43.

The Government is considering increasing capacity of the Panama Canal by adding a third set of locks. The Maritime Commission said that would cost only a fifth as much as the Nicaragua project and would provide facilities for five times the traffic now using the Panama route.

Nun Who Worked In America Listed For Beatification

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, June 17 (AP).—A Vatican news service reported today that beatification of Frances Xavier Carbini, an Italian nun who labored and died in the United States, was expected in October or, at the latest, in January.

It added two others were to be beatified in the same ceremony—Maria Giuseppa Lossello, founder of the Sisters of Mercy, and Domenica Mazzarello, co-founder of the Sisters of Maria Ausiliatrice.

Mother Cabrini died in Chicago in 1917 after 27 years of work in the United States in which she was instrumental in establishment of about 40 schools, orphanages, hospitals and other institutions conducted by the Missionary Sisters of the Sacred Heart.

2 Die by Gas, Leaving Notes On Cowardice

3 Capital Suicides Include Treasury, WPA Aides, Norfolk Nurse.

Unknown to each other in life, a man and a woman who killed themselves here yesterday had the same thought in death. Both left notes referring to cowardice.

"This is the best way out. Teach Muggsy to not be a coward," read a note left by Mrs. Agnes C. Wyman, 25, nurse at the United States Marine Hospital at Norfolk, Va., who died in the gas-filled kitchen of an apartment at the Francis Scott Key Hotel, which she had rented a few hours before. A postcript to her note was: "Sorry to let you and Betty down." It was addressed to "George."

"Cowards die many deaths before their time, and the valiant die but one," quoted Russell Reaper, 34, attorney for the Treasury Department, in a note found beside his body in the kitchen of his home, 2119 H street northwest. All gas jets in the stove were open, the front door locked with a chain, and the kitchen door and windows tightly closed.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of sucide in Reaper's death. He said he would issued a certificate of suicide in case of Mrs. Wyman after the arrival of her husband, Dr. George P. Wyman, from Norfolk.

Mrs. Wyman was found by Louis McHenry, colored, of 139 Randolph place northwest, hotel janitor. Police said she had bolted the door, placed a blanket across the kitchen door and turned on four gas jets. Her note was written on an envelope which contained a $1,000 insurance policy.

Police said she registered at the hotel from Augusta, Ga. Papers in her possession indicated she was born in Washington, and at one time was a nurse at Garfield Hospital.

Reaper was discovered by his wife, Mrs. Amy Reaper, when she returned home from a shopping trip. The note was written on a sheet of pink memorandum paper and was a paraphrase of a line from Shakespeare's Julius Caesar: "Cowards die many times before their death. The valiant never taste of death but once."

Reaper, who formerly lived in New York, had been with the Treasury Department since 1933.

Early last night Mrs. Gladys Daugherty was discovered in the bedroom of her home, 3944 Sevneth street northeast, a bullet wound above her right ear. She died shortly after being admitted to Casualty Hospital.

Mrs. Daugherty, neighbors told police, had been with the WPA three months and Thursday received notice her services no longer would be needed. They said her husband, whose name they did not know, was in Baltimore.

George Burnap, Parks Expert, Expires at 52

From 1910 until 1916 he was landscape architect of public buildings and grounds here; he helped originate the city plan, park system and park designs for Washington. Mr. Burnap also helped design park systems at St. Joseph, Mo.; Omaha, Nebr.; Council Bluffs, Iowa; Gramville, N. Y.; Hagerstown, Md., Petersburg, Va., and Greenwood, S. C.

A native of Hopkinton, Mass., he was graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1906 and from Cornell University in 1910. He was a fellow of the American Academy in Rome, and studied at the University of Paris.

He was a member of Societe des Urbanistes Diplomes of Paris, of the National Press Club, the Technology Club of New York, and the University Club of Chicago. He was the author of "Landscape Architecture," published in 1916.

Besides Mrs. Everett, he is survived by another sister, Mrs. George R. Colby, of Boston. The body is being sent to Boston for funeral services and interment.

Mrs. Chenoweth's Funeral Is Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Elizabeth M. Chenoweth, mother of Miss Lillian Chenoweth, State regent of the D. A. R. of the District, will be held at 3 p. m. today at her home, 1350 Meridian place northwest. She died at her home yesterday.

A native of Tippah County, Miss., she was a daughter of Col. Benjamin Nabers. She had lived in Washington since 1900. She was treasurer of Naomi Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, for 23 years. She was also active in the Continental and Manor House Chapters, D. A. R., and was a member of the house committee at the annual sessions of the Continental Congress.

Baby Opens Eyes on World Dark to Mother

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Scott and their son who tips the scales at 7 pounds 4¾ ounces. The mother has been sightless since she was 9 months old.

A blue-eyed baby boy yesterday let loose a healthy squall and looked at a world his mother has not seen for 25 years.

Sightless since the age of 9 months, Mrs. Louis C. Scott, wife of the secretary of the District Association of Workers for the Blind, says she has no desire to see, herself, but rejoices in her infant son's vision.

The baby was born at the Washington Sanitarium yesterday morning.

Mrs. Scott assists her husband in his position as secretary of the association for aid to the blind and, according to him, "does most of the work," including the typing of thousands of letters.

The baby will be named Norman Orville, after the Rev. N. O. Scribner, Methodist minister in Gaithersburg, Md., who takes an active interest in projects for assisting the blind. Mr. and Mrs. Scott were married in Washington May 4, 1935, by the Rev. John A. Golihew, blind preacher.

Landis

unconscious on a lonely Northeast road.

Heflin announced completion of his case after reciting the statement aloud. A consultation at the bench of Justice Adkins followed and Kelly asked for a directed acquittal of the first degree murder charge, contending that no proof of premeditation had been shown.

He was overruled, but countered with requests for the same type of verdict on a charge of second degree murder, citing evidence that Mrs. Landis fell from her husband's moving car and killed herself. This motion, also, was overruled.

Landis "Broken."

Relentless questioning and alert observations on the part of detectives resulted in "breaking" Landis and obtaining from him an admission he had seen his wife the night she was attacked, according to testimony yesterday.

From the time he was called to Casualty Hospital to identfy his 22-year-old estranged wife, Blanche, until he was taken to the Fourth Precinct for further examination, Landis denied he had left his post at the fireboat station, detectives testified.

It was Detective Sergt. Robert Barrett who discovered blood on the youth's shirt and behind his ear. And it was this startling discovery that prompted Landis to change his story.

"But if I tell you the truth, I'll have no defense—I'll go to the electric chair," Landis was quoted as saying.

Then, said Barrett, he admitted his previous story "was a lie" and agreed to tell the truth.

Jury Hears Statement.

As read to the jury by Heflin, Landis' final story in part was:

"I reported for duty (at the Fireboat station) at 6 p. m. I sat around until I went on watch at 9 p. m. When I was relieved at 1:30 a. m. I went upstairs to bed. I lay across the bed for a while, then got up, dressed and went to my wife's home (2014 Monroe street northeast). I honked the horn several times and she came out.

"My purpose was to arrange with my wife to pay some bills. She got into the car herself and we rode through Mount Rainier and Hyattsville. I arranged to give her $40 a month instead of $45, so I could pay the bills. We turned around and came back in Rhode Island avenue. I turned off at Eastern avenue and my wife got nervous.

"She asked me what I had inside of my jacket and I told her nothing. As I turned into Twenty-fourth street near Taylor (northeast) the road was bumpy and I slowed down. She got frightened when I slowed down and started to jump out. I tried to stop her and lost control of the car. She jumped and hit the rear right fender.

"When I finally stopped and went back, she was lying in the middle of the road. I tried to lift her, but got all bloody. I realized I was away from my station without permission, something came over me and I left her lying there and went back to work."

Landis then described (according to the statement) how he washed his hands, attempted to clean the blood from his clothes, cut the sleeves from his shirt and burned them with his socks in a kitchen stove at the firehouse.

It was a short time later, he was quoted as saying, when he was called to Casualty Hospital.

His statement concluded:

"I regret the whole thing happened and I can't understand why my wife jumped from the car unless she thought I had a gun and got frightened when I slowed down."

Landis, according to Sergt. Barrett and Detective Sergt. William Liverman, of the homicide squad, could not explain how a home-made sandbag—which he admitted owning—was found soaked with blood near where his wife was found.

He said, according to the detectives' testimony, that the sandbag—a white sock filled with sand—was made for protection against holdups. Landis was quoted as saying he carried the sandbag in the rear seat of his car.

He explained in the same way the presence of a policeman's nightstick and a .38-caliber automatic in his auto, the jury was told.

Franco Breaks Counter Drive, Presses South

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France, June 17.—Insurgent dispatches said tonight Gen. Franco's eastern armies had smashed a Spanish government counteroffensive along the Mijares River and resumed a general advance toward Valencia, 35 miles to the south.

Insurgents were said to have occupied for the second time the river town of Villarreal, which had been recaptured by the government.

Besides the column advancing southward along the Mediterranean coast, another insurgent column was pushing in the same direction in hilly territory to the west.

Previously government dispatches said their forces had struck back, driving insurgents to the north of the Mijares, and that government reinforcements were moving up in numbers.

In the South, insurgents reported steady progress in their Cordoba Province drive.

Fifteen persons were killed and 35 injured in a predawn insurgent air raid on Alicante. Valencia also was raided in late afternoon and reported several casualties.

Ship Charges Dismissed.

Gibraltar, June 17 (A).—A British court today dismissed charges supported by a German nonintervention agent that the captain of the British steamer Stancroft had violated the merchant shipping act by carrying Spanish war supplies.

The nonintervention officer, Capt. Hermann Hintze, testified he found nine aircraft engines, 17 boxes of cartridge cases and a case containing 15 empty shells aboard the Stancroft after it loaded at Barcelona en route to another Spanish port.

The court interpreted the merchant shipping act as inapplicable to transit between Spanish ports. The prosecution appealed.

Relief In Kind.

Heretofore the WPA has functioned as a work-giving agency, buying materials and supplies only in conjunction with its projects. Under the new relief-spending bill, however, the administrator is given a $25,000,000 fund which may be used in emergencies for direct relief. Thus, inconspicuously, the WPA is confessing the inadequacy of the effort to provide work, as opposed to doles, for the unemployed.

In his contemplation of the purchase of goods for direct distribution to the unemployed Mr. Hopkins is said to have a double objective: to aid the needy and to reduce excess inventories. Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, has persuaded the WPA chief that a purchase of several million dollars of clothing from manufacturers would be a boon to garment workers. That is no doubt true. But an equally persuasive argument might be advanced on behalf of other distressed manufacturers with unsold stocks on their shelves.

If the principle is sound, why shouldn't the WPA purchase used cars and present them to relief workers to drive to and from their jobs? Their removal from dealers' stocks would certainly clear the way for increased activity in the automobile industry. And it is difficult to see why the latter should be discriminated against, and the clothing industry favored, in the distribution of subsidies bestowed at the discretion of Mr. Hopkins and his advisers.

From the viewpoint of the needy, moreover, such plans are of dubious value. Experience with the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation has shown that buying for the purpose of stabilizing agricultural prices does not provide a well-balanced diet for hungry people. Buying to relieve clothing manufacturers of excess stocks would not supply the destitute with the garments they need most. Outright doles, leaving the household on relief to select its own necessities, would be more economical, more efficient, and at least equally stimulating to industry.

WPA work-relief is inadequate and wasteful on a huge scale. The relief-in-kind that Mr. Hopkins contemplates is inadequate and wasteful on a small scale, in addition to opening up many dangerous prospects of favoritism in subsidies. Evidence accumulates that the present relief system will eventually have to be swept away in its entirety, with Federal aid limited to direct cash payments apportioned among the States and their subdivisions according to the intensity of the need.

Since we cannot afford to provide jobs for all the employables, the obvious alternative is to make sure that relief funds provide a maximum amount of help for the destitute. That can only be done by a system of direct relief locally administered, supplemented by Federal grants-in-aid, and supervised by Federal civil servants.

Taxicab Liability.

Final enactment of the District taxicab liability insurance bill came as a compromise move to save as much as possible of eminently desirable legislation. If the Senate had not receded from its reasonable position in order to accept the House bill, the fight for compulsory taxicab insurance would have had to begin all over again next year. Thanks to Senator King's efforts, the sound principle underlying both the Senate and House bills has now been established. It will be much easier to eliminate defects of the measure than it would have been to start again from scratch.

Considering the ease with which the Senate and House compromised major differences over other legislation, there is something strange about the repeated failure to agree upon the method by which taxicab operators must establish financial responsibility for injuries and damages they may cause. The uncooperative attitude of the House inevitably raises suspicion that some members were more interested in defeating the bill than in working out satisfactory terms for its application. Whether or not that is the case, the Senate's acceptance of two-thirds of a loaf, rather than nothing at all, has worked to the District's advantage.

As the bill was adopted it has two major weaknesses. It would permit any organization of cab operators to establish a trust fund of $75,000 in place of individual insurance policies for each driver. For the largest association in the District this may mean a considerable saving. But it may also mean discrimination against most of the other 15 associations operating in Washington and against individual cab owners. Certainly it is an encouragement to monopoly in this field.

If this favoritism should have the extreme effect of driving all the District's 4,500 cabs into one association, the total liability insurance for all of them would still seem to be only $75,000. Some authorities believe this sum would be woefully inadequate. It is possible, of course, that safeguards may be worked out by the Public Utilities Commission, which has more power than personnel to administer the act. Already the commission has removed its ban upon organization of additional taxicab associations so as to leave independent groups an opportunity to take advantage of the trust-fund arrangement.

Should the PUC's regulations leave the measure still unsatisfactory, that will be the strongest possible argument for its amendment next year.

Modern State Governments.

While attempts to reorganize both the Federal Government and that of the District of Columbia have failed thus far, the States have been making steady progress toward more systematic administration. Ten States have reorganized their executive machinery under the stress of reduced revenues since 1931. Fourteen others had previously revamped their administrative systems. In many respects, therefore, the typical State government is more modern than either the Federal or District governments.

Illinois led the way toward reform of haphazard and inefficient State governmental machinery in 1917. At that time the administrative systems of most States were composed of numerous boards and commissions, some responsible to the voters, others to the Legislature or the Governor. Their jurisdictions frequently overlapped. Their operations were costly and often inefficient. When Connecticut finally reorganized its government in 1937, for example, it had built up a welter of 132 independent administrative agencies headed by boards, commissions or single administrators.

The general tendency has been to consolidate these agencies into executive departments with special arrangements for quasi-judicial boards. Duplication is thus eliminated, overhead costs are frequently reduced, responsibility is centralized and effective direction of administrative agencies by the Governor becomes possible. Departmentalization has won such favor in the States that the Prettyman committee thought the advantages of applying it to the District would be obvious. Unfortunately, they were not.

Perhaps the most significant trend in the evolution of State government is the increasing power of Governors. Many of the changes effected have been designed to confer upon the State executive the authority and responsibility of a general manager. To a much greater extent than was the case a few years ago Governors are now directing the operations of adminstrative agencies and controlling budgetary systems.

As recently as 1913 legislative committees were exercising complete control over estimates and expenditures of State executive agencies. Now every State, except Arkansas, has a budgetary system and three-fourths of them give their Governors full authority to prepare programs of expenditures. In 39 States Governors may veto separate items in appropriations bills. Seven States have gone so far as to forbid their Legislatures to increase appropriations over the Governor's recommendations.

Like all reforms, this trend toward expansion of executive power may be carried too far. But the principle as thus far applied is basically sound. A State, no less than any other agency set up to serve the people, must have co-ordinated direction of its undertakings if it is to function effectively. That does not mean executive encroachment upon the duties of the Legislature, but rather an essential development of the executive in his own sphere.

The fact that the States are so successfully remodeling their governmental systems to meet modern conditions affords a cogent reply to those who contend that State government is obsolete. Many State Legislatures have accomplished what Congress has on several occasions failed to do.

The contrast between the modernization process going forward in the States and the long neglect of Washington's makeshift government is particularly striking. During the last 25 years most State governments have undergone sweeping changes in the interests of economy and efficiency. But the District is still struggling along with the same loosely-designed governmental machinery that was assigned to it 64 years ago. Even if Congress had no interest in modernizing the District government for the benefit of local residents, it should have been shamed into action by the contrasting progress of the States in meeting their administrative problems.

The New Chain Bridge.

The Potomac and Anacostia Rivers, and the Valley of Rock Creek, combine to make Washington a city of bridges. To the present number of imposing structures was added yesterday, with appropriate ceremonies, the New Chain Bridge. It is a splendid addition to a handsome family.

The new structure spans the Potomac at a point where records show that there have been bridges continuously at least since 1797. From the days of the first wooden structure, which collapsed in a few years from natural decay, there has been constant progression. The New Chain Bridge, though modest compared with its sisters farther down the river, is a vast and welcome improvement over its predecessor.

Traffic over the new viaduct is certain to be much heavier than that which was carried by the famous structure which it replaces. The southward spread of the suburban area, and the growing popularity of the beautiful Virginia country to the west of Washington, insure a tremendous increase in the vehicular traffic which the span at Little Falls will carry in the years to come.

If the new structure lasts as long, and gives as efficient service, as its predecessor the $320,000 cost involved will in course of time come to appear trivial. Old Chain Bridge, long one of the most famous of Washington landmarks, remained in constant service for 62 years and its massive foundations have been carried over into the new construction.

Because of their symbolic values bridges should be beautiful as well as utilitarian. At a time when many frontiers are foci of nervous tension it is appropriate to spare a thought to this new and pleasurable link across a river which, in the memory of Washingtonians still living, divided two warring armies.

Out Goes The Yardstick

In effect, the Tennessee Valley Authority's yardstick for the measurement of private power rates has been thrown out of the window by its committee on financial policy. The committee found no scientific method of dividing costs of completed TVA dams between flood control, navigation and generation of power. So it considered all the theories for making such allocations and then relied upon its own judgment. Reliance on judgment, of course, is the antithesis of a scientific yardstick.

It is interesting to note that the committee discarded the by-product theory which Director Lilienthal appears to have favored. Of all the theories they examined the experts found most merit in the "alternative-justifiable-expenditure" theory. In layman's language this means the division of costs among the three functions, flood control, navigation and power, on the basis of what each would have cost if undertaken alone. In making its final allocation, however, the committee considered numerous other factors.

There are indications that the study was thorough and to a large extent objective. The allocation to power of 52 per cent of the total "present value" of Wilson Dam and actual cost of the Wheeler and Norris projects is probably higher than many observers expected. After specific expenditures for flood control, navigation and power had been deducted, the committee attributed to power 40 per cent of the joint outlay for all three purposes. Whether or not that is a reasonable division, it is a considerable distance away from the by-product theory.

The most significant fact about the report, however, is its frank admission that when multi-purpose projects are built the cost to be attributed to any one purpose is a problem "of judgment rather than scientific calculation." In concluding its discussion of allocation theories the committee says:

> The allocations finally recommended are admittedly based on an exercise of judgment after considering all facts; nevertheless the committee is unanimous in believing that they furnish a fair basis for determining the relative shares of the various functions in the joint costs.

Realistic analysis of the problem could scarcely have led to a different conclusion. In calculating the benefits of TVA projects to navigation, for example, the committee had to consider possible savings in freight rates, the possible increase in traffic, the possible extension of markets, the possible growth in population and the possible increase of recreational activities as a result of these factors. When so many intangible factors are involved it is nonsense to pretend that any exact finding of TVA's value to navigation can be made.

The so-called yardstick rates of the TVA were fixed without knowledge as to the cost of the power sold. The current report eliminates hope that this cost can ever be fixed with any degree of exactitude. Consequently, those rates will be of no value in determining what private power companies in the Tennessee Valley should charge. Since such a large element of judgment is involved, moreover, it would seem only fair to assign the final task of fixing rates to a governmental agency more independent than the TVA. That policy is already followed in the case of some other Federal power projects.

Blessings From All.

Despite wars and rumors of wars, despite strife and confusion in so many parts of the world, June remains par excellence the month of orange blossoms and marriage bells. And in that happy fact harassed mankind will find deep comfort and solace.

At Canton, N. Y., on Thursday, a Rochester heiress married a $21-a-week clerk despite parental disapproval. It was in the best American (and Hollywood) tradition of love surpassing barriers of class and wide disparity of income.

And at Nahant today, with both families giving their heartfelt blessings and with the whole Nation figuratively looking on with delighted interest, Anne Clark is marrying John Roosevelt, son of the President and the First Lady.

High and humble, rich and poor, romance makes all Americans kin. And with a unanimity decidedly lacking with regard to so many other matters, they will wish both the obscure couple of Canton and the spotlighted pair of Nahant the fullest measure of domestic felicity.

No Racial Restrictions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Washington Post rarely makes a serious mistake on matters of principle. I wish, however, to advise you for the benefit of Mr. Harry Ritner, of the Washington Federal Bulletin, who was quoted in the Federal Diary at length on Wednesday, June 15, of a most unfortunate inaccuracy as to a matter of principle as well as an uncalled-for misstatement of fact.

The United Government Employes, Inc., has no racial restrictions as to its membership or benefits. All American citizens employed by the Federal or District government, WPA, NYA, CCC, RFC, FHA, in other words, Government workers in permanent or emergency departments and agencies everywhere in the United States are eligible for membership in the U. G. E. regardless of race, creed, color or politics.

We take no particular exception to Mr. Ritner's apologetic inference and parenthetical aside in anticipation of future criticism of his remarks for mentioning the fact that the U. G. E. was the only organization represented before the proper Congressional committees at the right time during consideration of the $4,000,000,000 work-relief bill to score for the underprivileged, and forgotten workers of the country, despite the fact the official spokesman is proud to be described as a colored man.

We are grateful to Mr. Hart and The Washington Post for your most helpful support of the U. G. E.'s campaign for the past two years of our organization. It is likewise your victory and all the people of Washington and the country generally.

Doomed Trees.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While Washington is being well baked by a relentless summer's sun the work of destroying the splendid old trees on K street proceeds as planned by the politicians. The plea from nature lovers and those that prefer shade to sizzling concrete, viz., "Woodman, spare that tree" falls on deaf ears.

Maj. L'Enfant, who planned this formerly beautiful city, would doubtless twist and turn in his grave if he could behold the havoc caused by those who are attempting to modernize Washington.

Not only are historic homes being dismantled, frequently to be replaced by unsightly parking lots, but box hedges, grassy lawns, flower beds and bushes are yielding to the so-called march of progress. Shade trees seem actually out of place in the modern scheme of things now that concrete has been crowned a commercial king. But does steaming asphalt, in the form of slightly broader thoroughfares, compensate for grass and cooling shade in a city that experiences tropical heat in the summer season? And why aren't property owners, who are compelled to pay heavy taxes, consulted before their front lawns and trees are destroyed?

The following verses from a poem in the Christian Science Monitor, entitled, "The Lyric Trees," by Rosalie Edge, seem especially applicable to the carnage in question:

"Doomed to die by men's decrees.
Their fate upon the Senate's knees,
Mighty, soaring, timeless trees."

E. K. GOLDSBOROUGH.

Wealth And Unemployment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The one problem more important than all others which challenges solution today is this: "Why is it that, in spite of enormously increased power to produce wealth by use of labor-saving machinery and improved methods of transportation, wages tend to a minimum and there is an increasing number of unemployed who can get no work at any wage?"

If this were a problem in mechanics, engineering, architecture, astronomy or chemistry the correct solution would be provided without delay. But this is a problem in political economy, a science more neglected than any other in consequence of which neither our colleges nor our legislators are able to solve this great problem.

It was solved some 60 years ago by Henry George in his masterpiece, "Progress and Poverty," and his solution has never been successfully challenged. Meanwhile our legislators flounder along in pitiable ignorance of economic laws. For example, we have recently had a week dedicated to foreign commerce and without any objection whatever to the tariff wall which surrounds the country preventing foreign commerce. Again, Congress has been endeavoring to promote prosperity by passing a wage-and-hour bill at a time when Mother Nature has already established minimum wages at zero, and by a measure which is certain to further increase the number of unemployed.

The Value Of Monasteries.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Last month Mr. Hitler (imitating the eight-wived Henry VIII) confiscated a monastery in Austria, and "A Virginian" indirectly approved this by setting forth what somebody wrote in Scribner's Magazine in 1877 deprecating the value of monasteries to society.

I respectfully submit this historical estimate of the value of monastic institutions from the pen of the historian, Maitland, page 431 of his "The Dark Ages." (Maitland is written up in the Encyclopedia Brittanica as a historian.)

The extraordinary benefit which the Benedictine monks conferred on society by colonizing waste places — places chosen because they were waste and solitary, and such as could be reclaimed only by the incessant labors of those who were willing to work hard and live hard—lands often given because they were not worth keeping—lands, which, for a long while, left their cultivators half starved, and dependent on the charity of those who admired what we must too often call a fanatical (!) zeal—even the extraordinary benefit, I say, which they conferred on mankind by thus clearing and cultivating, was small in comparison with the advantages derived from them by society, after they had become large proprietors, landlords with more benevolence, and farmers with more intelligence and capital, than any others.

Inasmuch as the monastic institutions were splendid compilers and custodians of the Bible throughout the ages; and since the monastic institutions did so much to help civilize and advance the Southwestern part of the United States (Texas and California), out of gratitude I respectfully submit the above.

Mussolini's Minutes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a foreword to a recent book of speeches, the one and only Il Duce says: "I granted 60,000 audiences in one year and dealt in the same period with 1,887,112 written requests which have been sent to my private secretary."

Our great executives who grant interviews and dictate many letters each day would doubtless give much to know how Mussolini dispatched so much business in the time stated. Allowing an average of three minutes to the interview, not counting the time of entering and leaving his long audience chamber, he would consume 180,000 minutes or 3,000 hours. He would have to devote eight hours each day throughout the year to interviews alone.

But what of the 1,887,112 written requests which he personally disposed of direct to his private secretary? If he gave a minute to each request, he would need 1,887,112 minutes, which added to the 180,000 minutes allowed for interviews would total 2,067,112 minutes. There are only 525,600 minutes in the year, and since so far as we know, he did not, like Joshua, command the sun to stand still, his subjects may wonder where he found the needed minutes—but they would not dare ask.

Politics In Relief.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A humane administration with a sense of political decency and a conception of the fitness of things would have insisted from the first that there be rigid laws and severe penalties to protect the distribution of relief from politicians.

It is fundamental that human miseries and the dealing of mercy must be immune from the abuses that grow out of political excesses. Yet after six years of scandalous waste, coercion, herding of the unfortunate, and frauds against the people and the needy alike, we find the New Dealers in the Senate, led by the creator of a "new moral climate;" egged on by the "defender" of the "integrity of the morals of democracy," voting shamelessly, solidly and, unfortunately with success, to defeat an effort to take dirty politics out of the WPA and relief. The New Deal has reached a new low (and still sinking lower).

The brazen use of public money as a campaign fund, now going forward without further attempt at concealment, and with the open approval of New Deal leadership, has the effect of spreading the poison of Tammany politics throughout the land.

Truly the New Deal has established a "new moral climate," a rank growth of corruption which threatens the safety, the self-respect and character of a free people.

Peace At Callander.

We are glad to know that the trouble up at Callander has apparently been settled and we believe everybody else in Canada will be glad, too. "Callander" to all the world can, of course, never mean anything but the Dionne "quints."

The arrangement that has been made seems a sensible and satisfactory one. In the first place, the Dionne family is to be united at last, in a new house at Corbeil, a house, we read, in which it will be possible to isolate the quintuplets, should health reasons require it. Father Dionne is to have somewhat more to say in the future arrangements for his famous daughters than he has had hitherto, a provision that will appeal to most fathers. At the same time—and as it seems quite properly—the Ontario government, through existing organizations, will continue its supervision over the children.

One thing that can very probably be expected is the putting an end, after the present season, to the twice-daily "shows" when the children have played in a yard before a concealed and ever-shifting crowd of visitors, which in the past two years or so has run into millions. In the new house, with all the family together, and with Papa Dionne's open opposition to the "shows" from the beginning, it seems pretty likely that this summer may see the last of them.

Of course, these children can never hope for lives entirely the same as those of other people. Nature determined that when she made them what they are. Thanks to the unsleeping care and love of those who have so far surrounded them, they are as yet "unspoiled," and everybody wants to see them kept that way, if that is humanly possible. They are rich children now and inevitably will become richer every year. Health and education are the most important things the guardians have to consider. Withdrawal from the public eye—literally speaking—might not be a bad thing for a while.

The Post Impressionist

School Garden.

WHEN I was 10 years old I had a school garden. In my classroom—this was during 1921 in Boston—the Liberty Loan posters had been displaced by colored lithographs of emaciated children with arms uplifted, begging for food. They were the children of sorrow, the "starving Armenians" of the Smyrna crisis, the homeless waifs of the Near East. I was considered quite an authority on this regrettable phase of contemporary history because one of my uncles, a naval officer, was based at Constantinople with part of the American fleet. His letters to me, long, colorful, informative stories, the teacher always read aloud to the class.

The question of school gardens arrived with the spring. It was pointed out that those who were particularly desirous of helping the starving Armenians could sign up for a school garden and send their produce across on one of the July food relief ships.

When the matter was first proposed—it was in arithmetic class and we kept the teacher discussing it as long as we could—I was not keenly interested. It seemed at first wiser to perfect my second baseman's technique in out-of-school hours and then, when I went into the big leagues, I could send the Armenians some money. But even money could not buy vegetables in a land where there were no vegetables. The poster children on the front blackboard stared down at me, helplessly. Besides, I had a certain prestige to uphold, because of my uncle . . .

I drew school garden lot, No. 14, on the left, middle edge of Ginger Hill. The following Saturday, after a short session of ball practice that lasted four hours, I hiked up to give my farm a quick look. The whole lower side of the hill had been plowed for the school and the lots marked off. Mine measured 15 x 20 feet and was very uninspiring.

I don't quite remember when my interest started to boil. I think it was after I had the seeds down and my father had helped me build a rock retaining wall on the lower side to keep my good earth from washing away. The loam was a rich, dark brown. I got down on my hands and knees when I sowed the seed, patting each row firmly with my hands. I had chosen my crop with care; spinach was said to be good for children but I couldn't bring myself to inflict it even on the starving Armenians. I compromised by planting Swiss chard and corn.

I went up every day after that to see if my crop was coming up. I worried considerably when I learned I was the only one of all the school garden farmers who had used no fertilizer. For almost two weeks I would grab an old coal hod and small shovel every time I heard the clop-clop of horses' hoofs. I followed one team two miles before I had any luck. It was my mother who stopped this practice when she discovered I was treating my fertilizer scientifically, spreading it out on our back lawn to dry before using. Women can be very difficult, sometimes.

The corn was coming in slower than the Swiss chard. That came up lush and green, growing faster every day. By early July the leaves were large and webby and looked unpleasantly like spinach. They were about ready to cut when the telegram came.

It was from my uncle. He had docked at the Boston Navy Yard and was coming out to our house for the night. He was sailing again, later in the week, returning to the Near East with supplies. My mother promptly telephoned my aunts and soon the whole house was bustling; extra leaves were placed in the dining room table, cakes were made and frosted with delicious icing, and out in the kitchen a roasting turkey sizzled slowly.

My uncle wasn't in the house an hour before I dragged him out to see my school garden. He walked up to Ginger Hill with me, in his uniform and gold braid, and all the kids were speechless with awe. He looked at the corn carefully, the three skinny rows of it.

"That corn crop," he decided, rubbing his stern chin reflectively, "should be ready just in time for the food ship. But this Swiss chard . . . it's the best Swiss chard I've ever seen!"

We ate the Swiss chard with the turkey. All of it. The way I looked at it, I'd still be helping the starving Armenians for was I not feeding the commander of an American destroyer who was helping them?

Flag Day.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will you be so kind as to tell me what has come over the American people? June 14 was the birthday of our National Emblem, yet on my way to work I did not meet a single man or woman with a flag on. They glared at me because of my little flag as though I had a scorpion on my blouse. They are living under and being protected by that flag. One man where I work asked me why I had it on? I really think every newspaper here in our National Capital should take this subject up especially at this time when part of Europe is at war and we are living in a country of peace.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Are Americans Gamblers?

JOHN T. GIBSON challenges my contention that the people of this country gamble much less than they are popularly supposed to. I cited returns to show that in 1935, in the 18 States which permitted and supervised gambling on horse and dog races, the total business was only $257,562,000. By other methods I arrived at the conclusion that the annual American expenditure for Irish Sweepstakes tickets was only $21,000,000, excluding counterfeits and stolen fees.

PEGLER.

Of course, there is no way of knowing or estimating the amount whose investors received no run for their money in the Irish Sweeps. Even the promoters admit that counterfeits are sold here and that if an agent selling genuine tickets wants to steal the money the individual suckers have no recourse but to waylay him and take it out of his hide. He is supposed to remit the money and the stubs to Dublin, but his own conscience is his only policeman, and to err is human.

If it will be of any comfort to the other side of the argument, however, I will admit that the traffic in counterfeits and uncompleted deals is equal to that portion of the sweeps here which, although illegal, we may, for the sake of clarity, call legitimate. That would raise the American expenditure on the Irish Sweeps to $42,000,000 a year. The known volume of gambling even then is only about $300,000,000 a year, and I have to insist on the importance of the fact that the bulk of this money is wagered under legal, open conditions.

• • • •

MR. GIBSON drifts off into the dream world frequented by those who believe Americans bet in billions.

"Most of the money bet on the horse races in the United States is bet by persons absent from the track," says he. "The pari-mutuels handle at most about 10 per cent of the money bet on horse races. Independent bookies handle the rest," says he. Yes, but does he know?

Nobody knows how much money the bookmakers handle, even in the protected horse bourse which operates in Frank Hague's Jersey City. But we do know that much of the money wagered with bookmakers is represented in the mutuel figures, because bookmakers make a practice of dumping bets into the mutuels to inflate or deflate the track odds. We also know that the bookmakers, being outside the law, have to operate more or less stealthily. They have not the freedom which the licensed tracks enjoy.

I cannot claim to know any better than Mr. Gibson the amount of the bookmakers' business, but I do know that those who frequent pool rooms are, for the most part, scratchy, useless bums, and that if you were to pay $100 for the privilege of frisking a roomful of them you would be betting against yourself. The poolroom bettor is low and smelly and no good, and if it be argued that expense limits the number who can take advantage of the open facilities at the track the obvious answer is that the man who can't afford personal attendance can't afford to bet much, either.

• • • •

WE HAVE TO ADMIT, however, that the bookies' customers include many fairly prosperous occasionals, periodicals and habituals who do business by phone on 24-hour credit. But these are an absolutely unknown, fluctuating quantity, and Mr. Gibson offers no evidence that the book trade is nine times the track business. He just says so. I might grant—only for the sake of argument—that it is twice as great, but the total volume, book and track, would then be only about three-quarters of a billion, and there still is no reason to think that gamblers would give up horse betting to patronize a national lottery which gives slow action and clips 1,000 losers for every winner.

I don't care. Go ahead and have a national lottery if the idea can be bulled through Congress some time. But look at the countries which have chewed the muscle off their own arms to feed their bellies—France, Germany, Spain, Italy and Cuba, for example—and observe how peaked they are.

Ireland is an exception. But we buy half her tickets and the British colonies take much of the remainder, and Ireland thus gets fresh money all the time. Most countries either forbid export of their currency or patronize their own lotteries.

But Ireland couldn't buy half our tickets. Even in our busted state we could more feasibly buy half of Ireland, whose total capital investment is less than we bet in a year on the licensed tracks alone.

Mr. Disney Gets A Degree,

PRESIDENT—Disney, Walt; artist, friend of mice, glorifier of ducks and the man from whom millions first learned that a symphony is not a bend in a pipe; Mr. Disney, we are happy here at Harvard to confer upon you one of our 1938 degrees, trusting that you will not immediately try to animate it.

• • • •

MICKEY MOUSE—Don't be crude. Remember, Dopey, you're a Harvard man now.

• • • •

PRESIDENT—Harvard, I need not tell you, is most careful in its bestowal of such honors, and we thought of you a long time, Mr. Disney, before deciding to make the leap in your case, let the laughs fall where they may. From Cambridge to Hollywood is indeed a running broad jump and from the halls of Harvard to the movie funnies requires no minor knee action . . .

DONALD DUCK—Stop qualifying your remarks. Either we rate this or we don't.

• • • •

PRESIDENT—Nevertheless, Mr. Disney, it was our verdict here on the banks of the Charles, that anybody who can make the world laugh under present conditions is indeed an outstanding contributor to the welfare of man.

GRUMPY—I still think if we had waited we could have been tapped for Yale.

• • • •

PRESIDENT—In an era of pompous struttings you gave us the three little pigs, in an age of mad bellowings into loudspeakers you gave us the silly symphonies, in a time of exaggerated egoes you gave us Mickey and Minnie Mouse.

MINNIE MOUSE—I hope Princeton is listening in on this.

• • • •

PRESIDENT—In a day when the world was sickened by the goose-steppings, chest-thumpings and bullylike gestures of its notable figures, you have us Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs . . .

DOPEY—One more dwarf and we could make the Harvard crew.

• • • •

PRESIDENT—And so, Mr. Disney, Harvard, departing from the custom of catering only to the stuffed shirts, is happy to make you a master of arts, in any flavor you desire. Yale has its Rudy Vallee, Princeton has its administration cutups and now Harvard has Snow White, the Seven Dwarfs, Donald Duck and all the others. From now on we won't mind those seasonal football defeats, in fact it is a possibility that Dopey will be an improvement over our quarterbacks. Congratulations, Mr. Disney, and best wishes.

The Cedillo Revolt

By Jeffrey Paul.

Special Correspondent of The Post.

ALTHOUGH Gen. Saturnino Cedillo, who is said to have "rebelled" in San Luis Potosi around the middle of May, has not yet been captured, his movement is as dead as the figurative doornail. While it caused a lot of fuss, particularly in papers outside of Mexico, it was never regarded as very serious within the country. And there are plenty of reasons for the attitude of the Mexican people when they were told that Cedillo had risen.

There is little need to recount the background of the former secretary of agriculture. He was a typical "jefe politico" who got his start during the various revolutions that swept the country between 1913 and 1920. Never famed for his qualities as a commander, he was able to settle down in San Luis Potosi and carve out a feudal property that was his by right of conquest.

Calles never crossed him and he aided Calles against the "Cristeros" in the 1927-1929 revolt in Jalisco. Gen. Cardenas also took part in that campaign and there are many pictures from that time showing the two together. When Cardenas needed backing in his coup against Calles in 1935, he looked to Cedillo for help and got it. Soon Garrido Canabal, the self-advertised "Scourge of Tabasco" was on his way to oblivion and Cedillo moved in as secretary of agriculture in the Cardenas cabinet.

Once in the capital, Cedillo found himself the target of attacks by the left-wingers connected with the present administration. Student agitation resulted and the old chieftain, failing to get the moral support he though the president should offer, resigned his secretaryship and, after requesting a leave of absence from the army, he retired to his hacienda, Las Palomas, in his feudal domain.

Cedillo-Fascist Hook-Up Non-Existent.

WAS THERE any truth to the charges of the Communists and the C. T. M. labor crowd that Cedillo was the leader of the "reaction?" According to the lurid articles printed recently in the United States, German, Italian and Japanese agents were at the disposal of a man who fancied himself a "Mexican Hitler" and who was but awaiting the propitious time to sweep radicalism from the country and establish a totalitarian state.

A great deal of nonsense has been written about Mexico in the last 125 years of its history; but the Cedillo-Fascist hookup is about as silly a mess as has ever been dished up by people who see the Fascist phantom everywhere and the shadow of Moscow nowhere. Readers of The Post may remember that, months ago, it was predicted here that the radicals would find a way to remove Cedillo from national prominence before the election year of 1940 rolled around. Who can deny that, politically speaking, the general is as good as dead and buried? Did he really commit political suicide or did someone spring a trap on him?

Let us review the facts. There is no doubt that Cedillo had been gathering arms for some time; that he had a powerful agrarian army at his back that had aided the government in 1927-29; that he had several airplanes at his disposal; that he was opposed to much of what Cardenas was doing in the field of political and social legislation. It is very possible that he planned a revolt; it is much more probable that he expected, as do many other people, not military men, that an attempt to seize power will some day be made by the leftists.

Even had he intended to revolt, he hardly would have chosen such an unpropitious time, especially if he was advised by "German, Italian, and Japanese agents," as the aforementioned article want us to believe. The Mexican people, united in the face of the threat to national integrity because of the oil expropriation, were in no mood to listen to the siren song of revolution. Cardenas could count on their support as no Mexican president has been able to since the long-gone days when Don Porfirio was first establishing peace and order with his policy of "bread or a club."

At any rate, President Cardenas announced that he was going to visit the Vera Cruz oil fields; but he reversed his direction and appeared suddenly in San Luis Potosi, the city which is the capital of the state of the same name. From the steps of the governor's palace, he indicated that he knew what was going on; that he was ready to forgive all who were in arms or about to take them up; and he held out the olive branch to Don Saturnino.

THEN, we are told, Cedillo revolted. What, according to all the dispatches from the home state of the rebel, has been the actual extent of the rebellion? An airplane dropped a proclamation on the streets of San Luis and near the city of Tampico. Another plane dropped three or four bombs not far from the temporary residence of the president in the war zone.

A half dozen very small skirmishes took place, in which some agrarians were wounded and two or three leaders of these parties killed. Not more than three soldiers have been reported wounded. Nor should it be overlooked that several derailments of trains have been laid to Cedillistas, although many people feel them guilty only in the two cases where dynamite was planted on the rails.

Taking all these facts into consideration and granting the thoroughness and efficiency with which President Cardenas and Secretary of War Avila Camacho acted, it certainly looks as though Cedillo had been taken unawares, beaten to the punch before he was ready to fire a shot. President Cardenas has proved himself brave and, in view of the past actions of most of his predecessors, magnanimous almost beyond belief. The general feeling has been that Obregon or Calles would have drowned the Cedillistas in their own blood; Cardenas gave the impression of taking their guns away, spanking them, and sending them home to tend to their fields like good little boys.

So the rebellion is over. One wonders did it ever start. For already a campaign, political at least at this stage, has begun to overthrow Gen. Roman Yocupicio, governor of Sonora, and named by the "national magazine" which got its dope straight from Mexican leftists, as sure to rise when Cedillo did. Yocupicio has been unfriendly to the labor crowd, especially Lombardo Toledano's C. T. M. For this, and because he has presidential ambitions, it was forecast here that both he and Cedillo would be rendered ineffective before President Cardenas leaves the presidency. Cedillo has gone. Let us watch what happens to the hard-bitten Sonoran.

While Gen. Cardenas was in San Luis Potosi, Gov. Manero of Tabasco, made himself nationally unpopular by urging his police to shoot into a crowd of unarmed men, women and children who had gathered in Villahermosa, capital of the state, to plead for the religious freedom so long denied them. Several were killed and wounded and the indignation of the country was promptly reflected in bitter press editorials which were featured in every paper, no matter what its political complexion.

Religious Freedom Denied In Tabasco.

IT SEEMS that religious freedom is still a political football in Tabasco despite the fact that Garrido Canabal, who tore down churches and burnt statues and paintings to prove his atheism, is living in luxurious exile in Central America. The government has issued a statement saying it favors religious toleration, but it has made no move to investigate the killings or to punish those responsible. There is every expectation, however, that the people will soon get the freedom they are demanding. That has been the Cardenas policy in the past and there is little doubt that it will be continued.

Speaking of the Senate, it has been the scene of a first-class row over a recent speech of the president. He declared that he looked to the workers to pull Mexico out of the present depression; that they must build factories, till the fields, erect dams and irrigation systems, etc., since there was no chance that either Mexican or foreign capital would be offered for the purpose.

Senator Ezequiel Padilla rose to give his idea of the crisis; and when he got through, he was promptly labeled "reactionary," an epithet which has lost absolutely all meaning in Mexico today. What had he said? Simply that he did not believe much could be accomplished without capital; that he thought the workers not advanced enough to do all the president wanted done; that the labor laws should protect employers as well as employes and that labor racketeering should be stopped; that he did not think the president infallible in his judgments, that the Senate and Chamber of Deputies should stop being servile; and that it was high time someone spoke the truth.

Repudiation

By Barnet Nover.

Germany And The Austrian Debt.

FOR A REGIME which professes to regard bolshevism as "World Enemy No. 1," the Hitler government shows a curious lack of hesitation about borrowing ideas and practices from the enemy.

Thus, in seeking to justify the repudiation by Germany of the loans contracted by the Austrian government abroad, Walther Funk, the minister of economics, used arguments singularly parallel to those advanced by the Soviet regime when, in 1918, it wiped the Czarist and Kerensky debts off the books.

"We repudiate," said Herr Funk," a system of political debts as economically destructive and contrary to the unalterable principle of National Socialist political and economic leadership . . . Loans (i. e. the Austrian obligations) were not granted for economic reasons. On the contrary they merely served the purpose of preventing Austria's Anschluss."

In other words, the fact that Austria has been absorbed by Germany makes any action in the past which, in the opinion of the Nazi regime, was designed to prevent that union, illegal, and therefore not binding on the Third Reich.

• • • •

WITH THIS concept as applied to Germany's international debts the United States Government rightly takes strong issue. Under international law, says the American note to Berlin, a nation taking over another nation, "assumes the debts and obligations of the absorbed state and takes the burdens with the benefits."

It remains to be seen what, if any, effect the American demarche will have on Germany's attitude. In view of the fact that the visible balance of German-American trade favors the United States (though the actual balance of payments favors Germany) we are not in a position to put the kind of pressure on Germany which Great Britain, Switzerland, the Netherlands and France have successfully been able to apply so as to get favored positions as debtors. And moral pressure, on the totalitarian states, as recent events abundantly prove, leaves them unmoved.

• • • •

GERMANY'S action on the Austrian debt is, of course, no isolated phenomenon. Many other states have in the past score of years openly or tacitly repudiated their financial obligations both with respect to their own citizens and with respect to foreigners. International morality in this field as in so many others has steadily been crumbling. But in Germany's case the repudiation of the Austrian debt has been coupled with other practices completely out of line with old standards and values.

In every country the power to tax is the power to destroy. But Germany is using that power of taxation, at least so far as the Jews are concerned, in a manner completely out of line with the practices of civilized lands. Indeed, the pretense of taxation is to an increasing degree being dropped by the Hitler government. Since to be a Jew is a crime and since the law, or what goes for law in the Third Reich, permits the confiscation of the property of criminals, the property of Jews can be taken from them without compensation.

How much property the Jews of Germany have is not known. But it is estimated that the total may run into several billions of marks in value. Taken over by the Nazi government this property, therefore, will be valuable in helping finance the second Four Year plan the purpose of which is to make Germany completely self-contained.

• • • •

SUCH EXPROPRIATIONS may not be enough. But the technique of confiscation can be applied to others than Jews.

It can and, to a degree, is already being applied to non-Jews whom the government deems hostile and hence traitorous. Should the latest anti-Jewish measures prove insufficient to provide the regime with necessary funds there is every reason to anticipate that the expropriation decrees now put into effect in the case of "non-Aryans" will be applied as well to groups of "Aryans" whom the regime may single out for chastisement.

There are, for instance, the Protestant and Catholic churches and the Protestant and Catholic elements which, against enormous odds, have been fighting the battle of religious freedom in the Third Reich. And the list of potential victims can be extended indefinitely.

In the meantime the Berlin government has discovered a new source of revenue in the desire of friends of captives of the Third Reich to get those captives out of the country. Thus Sigmund Freud not only had to leave all his property behind him before being permitted to leave Vienna for London, but in addition a ransom had to be paid. It is reported that a similar though very much larger ransom is being demanded as the price to set free Baron Louis Rothschild.

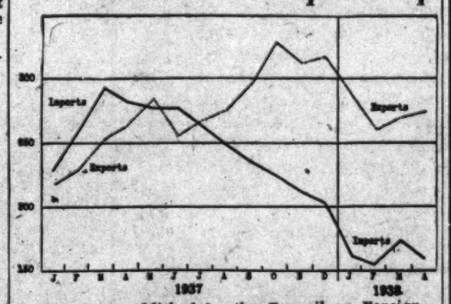
• • • •

SUCH PRACTICES reflect a callous indifference to civilized standards of conduct. But they also reflect a degree of financial stringency in the Third Reich quite out of line with the boasts of Nazi apologists.

In his speech at Bremen dealing with the Austrian debt, Herr Funk boasted of German prosperity in contrast to America's depression. The United States, he said, is the "veritable center of disturbance" of world economy. Germany, on the other hand, has "so far shown unbroken resistance to a business slump . . . The upswing of German economy continues uninterrupted."

Maybe so. But the methods by which this upswing has been achieved cannot stand very close scrutiny. Insofar as they have not been concealed they reveal not strength but weakness, not confidence but desperation.

Business Down—Exports Up



This chart published by the Council on Foreign Relations shows that the United States during the first half of 1937 had a surplus of imports over exports, or what is commonly called an "unfavorable" balance of trade. Since midyear of 1937 the balance has become increasingly "favorable." It is significant that the balance was "favorable" at a time when the country was sliding into a depression.

In this instance, as in many others, these descriptive terms are misleading. The import surplus was due in part to favorable economic conditions. It developed in a period of expansion, when we were purchasing large quantities of such materials as crude rubber, raw silk, wool, hides and skins to meet the growing domestic demand for finished products made from these goods. On the other hand, the drought in the United States and the Government's crop restrictions had created a shortage of certain farm products and had led to large imports of such commodities. When our bumper crops of 1937 began to reach the market such imports were checked, and the United States resumed its normal role as a seller of agricultural products. Our exports then began to increase. Meanwhile, business activity began to slacken and prices of raw materials purchased abroad began to decline, with a consequent shrinkage in the import figures and a swing of the balance of trade to the "favorable" side of the ledger.

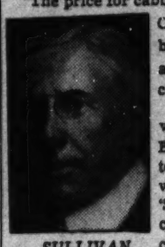
Tells How North Carolina Cabbages Rose From $8 To $9 Per Ton When AAA Entered Market.

By Mark Sullivan.

SOME WEEKS AGO AAA bought some cabbage in North Carolina. There is an account in the Twin City Daily Times of Morehead and Beaufort. I quote and partly paraphrase:

"The price for cabbage was advanced from $8 to $9 a ton on the Carteret County market today. Tons of the crop were inspected by Government representatives, loaded on freight cars, and then rolled on to other sections of the country for consumption.



SULLIVAN.

"The price, preceding the Government purchases, was $8 a ton. In that condition leading citizens of Beaufort telegraphed their Congressman at Washington, Graham A. Barden. Congressman Barden's action was immediate. He wired back to North Carolina: 'Surplus Commodities Corporation (AAA) have increased cabbage price from $8 to $9 per ton. Wish it could have been made more but authorities here state they are trying to push the price up and are in hopes that their entering the market will result in increased prices.'" . . .

That is a plain, straight tale. The Twin City Daily Times was writing for its local community, the sellers of cabbage, and could be frank. The purpose of AAA's purchase was to raise the price of cabbage, and it was done, and the Twin City Daily Times said so.

Turn now to another account of AAA's purchase of cabbage. This account is given by AAA itself in an announcement at Washington. This AAA account could not be as candid as the local newspaper account. AAA was obliged to be cagey. Its announcements may be read by consumers. It would hardly do to tell consumers that AAA is raising prices. AAA could hardly tell the general public what Congressman Barden said it told him, that it was "trying to push the price up." AAA must circumlocute, and tergiversate, and euphemize. The AAA announcement says:

"Approximately 11,000 tons of early cabbage, costing about $128,300, has been purchased by the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation in a surplus purchase program, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration announced today. . . . The program was designed to assist growers by removing excess supplies from normal trade channels. The cabbage bought by the corporation, amounting to 915 carloads, has been distributed to needy people through State relief agencies. . . . As a result of the purchases, AAA officials point out, needy people have benefited by a fresh green food not otherwise available to them and much waste has been avoided. Due also to the influence of the purchase program, a better quality of cabbage has been marketed in regular channels, they assert. Supplies after making purchases for relief distribution are adequate to take care of the commercial demand and assure consumers of a full supply at reasonable prices."

AAA, THE READER WILL OBSERVE, does not say the purchase was to "push the price up." It was "to assist growers by removing excess supplies from normal channels." And for other laudable purposes.

Doubtless it's quite all right. Doubtless there may be no justification for telling the story here, except perhaps as an interesting example of AAA's ingenuity with words. Maybe it's good for a smile, and a smile is worth any cost these days.

There is one point, however, which may interest the taxpayer—and not cause him to smile. The cabbages were turned over "to needy people through State relief agencies." One wonders a little. Since the taxpayers' money is to be used to relieve the needy, might not the Administration buy the food at the market price? If the Government money were given to the needy, the needy would certainly not deliberately pay more than the market price for their food.

It is not merely cabbage. AAA is buying all sorts of foodstuffs—flour, eggs, potatoes, canned peas, dry milk, apples and grapefruit juice. AAA is spending millions of dollars. I do not know what prices AAA is paying for any other foodstuffs—I only know what is on record about cabbage.

Air Injected Into Muscles To Stop Pain

Old Chinese Remedy Demonstrated to American Medical Association.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, June 17.—Injection of air into muscles to relieve chronic pain was demonstrated here today in the scientific exhibits of the American Medical Association.

The air goes in through a hypodermic needle and lubricates the spaces along which one bunch of muscles slides over another. The Chinese originated this air grease thousands of years ago, but the modern discoveries demonstrated here have resulted in finding virtually a new field in human anatomy and new explanations of causes of pain.

The discoveries in muscular anatomy were described today by Charles Murray Gratz, M. D., of Columbia University, who gave the scientific exhibit.

Dr. Gratz reported numerous examples of muscular pain which had failed to yield to other treatments and had disappeared with use of air. But he warned that at present this air grease should be used only on persons otherwise incurable.

A new treatment for epilepsy, which surpasses anything heretofore known, was also described by H. Houston Merritt, M. D., and Tracy J. Putnam, M. D., of Boston City Hospital and Harvard Medical School.

2 SMALL WORDS GIVE YOU THE WHOLE SECRET OF THE WORLD'S FINEST BEERS!

The most popular European beers and this country's leading 15 cent beers have the same quality as Gunther's!

They are DRY and BEER-Y, which means never sweet, never heavy bodied!

THOSE two little words give you the whole story! Dry and Beer-y! It's the same the world over... wherever beer drinkers gather and wherever good beer is brewed, a dry, beer-y beer is by far the outstanding choice! It can't help it! Real beer drinkers know that a beer that is dry is the best beer for them to drink because, being dry, it is never sweet or heavy, and doesn't give them that "filled-up" feeling like sweeter, heavier type brews, and, being beer-y, they know they are drinking a real man's beer... definitely not a "panty-waist" beer!

Just as the leading fifteen cent beer in this country is a real dry and beer-y beer, and as the most popular imported beers are dry and beer-y, Gunther's, the driest and beeriest beer you can find, is the overwhelming favorite in the Baltimore-Washington area! In this combined market, Gunther's is far and away the biggest seller!

Gunther's is brewed and aged according to formulas that have come down through the years, setting a standard for fine beer. Much of its dry, beer-y flavor is due to an unusually large percentage of choice Bohemian hops, a flavor that domestic hops, alone, cannot duplicate.

If you haven't tasted Gunther's recently, stop in at your favorite tavern and try just one glass... you'll be delighted with its smooth, honest beeriness... and amazed at its dryness and light bodied goodness! If you prefer, phone your nearest dealer and he'll be glad to deliver the attractive steinie bottles or cans to your doorstep in a jiffy. Try Gunther's, and you'll never again be satisfied with a sweeter, heavier type beer! Drink Gunther's, and know the full pleasure of a real dry, beer-y beer... a real beer drinker's beer... Gunther's Beer!

ALE DRINKERS!

You'll like Gunther's Famous Old English Brand Ale because it's "Mellow-Dry". Not as dry as Gunther's Beer, of course, but not as sweet as so many domestic ales. Gunther's Ale is made from a celebrated English formula to bring out all of the taste surprises and all the rich flavor for which fine ales the world over are noted. It's "Mellow-Dry".

When the sun is beating down and your throat is getting dry, try Gunther's... it's brewed for your thirst!

ON THE ECONOMY SIDE...

A dinner on a stick! So many delicious meals cooked on skewers! En Brochette, the French say, meaning "on a needle". Call them what you will, foods are easily prepared and served in this novel fashion.

The more inexpensive cuts of Lamb lend themselves to this smart economical recipe, using either cooked or raw Lamb.

The Gunther Hostess

(Serves Four)

1¼ lb. Lamb, shoulder or chuck cut in inch cubes. 8 slices of Bacon, double thickness.

METHOD: Put 3 or 6 cubes of Lamb on skewers with bacon (cut slices in quarters) between. Broil in hot oven, turning occasionally. Baste with fat from the bacon. Serve very hot with GUNTHER'S DRY BEER-Y BEER.

GAMES

Saturday always was a special night for parties, but now it's a MUST... with Gunther's Swing Party on the air over Station WJSV every Saturday night from 11 o'clock until 1... two hours of uninterrupted dance music to add to your enjoyment. SEE YOU THEN!

To enliven your party—try "IT TASTES LIKE..."

Blindfold all the men and have them taste ten different foods. Assign a girl to each man to write down his answers. High score wins a loud tie, which he must put on and wear, at once.

He will be guest speaker for the California State Christian Endeavor Convention at Oakland, Calif., June 25 and 26. How church members would decide issue of Death or Life of Blindness

There was much discussion at the time of the operation of five-week Helaine Colan, who was born with glioma, or tumor of the eye. The Gallup Poll has asked church members as well as non-church members what they would have done: Let the baby die or face a possible life of blindness after an operation. Compare your vote with the results of this poll, which will be published in Section III of Sunday's Post.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Married Five Years to Apologetic Philanderer, and Expecting Second Child, Wife Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married going on five years. I have a little girl aged 4 and am expecting another baby soon. About two years ago my husband and I quarreled. He used to go out every night and leave me home. When I asked him about it he said that he wasn't good enough for me; that I was too sweet a woman for him, because, hard as he tried, he simply couldn't resist the temptation to run around with other women. Not that he wanted to, he said; but because he just wasn't any good and couldn't help himself.

* * * *

I then persuaded him, for the baby's sake, to feel that he was good, and capable of doing the right thing. We had been getting along fine until just recently. For Christmas he gave me a watch and was very sweet until about two months ago. Then he started staying out late. He would come home, dress, and go out again. He would always return with lipstick on his shirt and handkerchief. I asked him about it and again he said he wasn't anything; that he just couldn't help it.

* * * *

I said that it was best that we separate, but he doesn't want me to do that. He said he wasn't going to ask his wife to go out with other men, but that he wished I would get someone who would appreciate me. But still he would want me to live with him, he said. I would like to know what I should do, because all this has me puzzled. Yours truly, E. W.

The Weakling's Technique.

DEAR E. W.: It simply isn't true that your husband is the abject and pathetic slave of sensual whim. The truth is that he just isn't willing to make the stalwart effort necessary for keeping himself in line; that it suits his selfish pleasure to cast moral responsibilities to the wind when attracted by the charms of some equally light-minded female. His actions, as well as his thoughts and impulses, could be disciplined to a socially acceptable mold, if he were willing to apply himself to the task. I have discussed your problem briefly with a psychiatrist, who remarks: "I don't believe in these so-called irresistible impulses. Any person who isn't crazy can resist an impulse if he wants to."

* * * *

Your husband's craven whining about his worthlessness is merely his way of saying he has no intention of making the effort necessary to develop adequate powers of self government. At the same time—and with paradoxical urgent sincerity, no doubt—he is trying to soft-soap you into an emotional attitude of compassionate willingness to bear with his obstinately cherished shortcomings.

* * * *

Like most unscrupulous weaklings who are cunning in indulging their weaknesses, he realizes there is no more powerful appeal he can make to the sensibilities of a strong and generous person, than to avow his weaknesses in contrast to that person's worth, and depend—with touching dependence—upon the stronger person's supposedly inexhaustible pity, forgiveness and protection. Yet, as a man of great spiritual stature once told me, such ill-advised charity as this is not the perfection of justice. "Justice," he said, "is the perfection of charity, but charity is not the perfection of justice." In other words, one is making no worth-while contribution to another's ultimate well being, in condoning his weaknesses to the point of encouraging them.

* * * *

It seems to me that your husband abandoned you altogether, in a spiritual sense, when he suggested by oily indirection that you suit your conduct to his; that you seek outside marriage those intangibles of companionship that can only be creatively discovered within its sacrosanct confines. It seems to me that your subsequent, counter-suggestion that the marrige be dissolved was the only intuitively, profoundly right retort. Morally, psychically, it was a sound conclusion you reached; the only conclusion which would, if acted upon, give you a firm foundation on which to continue a well-integrated personal existence.

* * * *

However, the fact that you are expecting a child places you at a sore disadvantage in dealing directly with the situation as it affects your own morals. It is virtually impossible to leave your husband now. I think you will have to let this situation drift until after the baby is born. By the time the child is a year old, say, if your husband has not recognized his behavior as flagrantly selfish and entirely remediable, and of his own violition set about correcting it (for his sake, your sake and the children's sake), then the obvious solution to the problem is complete legal separation.

* * * *

The only alternative is to reconcile yourself to the pallid existence of being your so-called husband's housekeeper, substitute mother and stop-gap mistress; the meekly unprotesting woman who hovers in the background of his life, catering to his creature comforts, taking her pay in the form of board and keep and whatever small-boy gratitude and crumbs of mate love he chooses to give her. And that alternative, in my opinion, would be a sorry, sordid and soul-starving compromise. M. H.

Family Quarrel At Dinnertime Is Bad Manners

By Margaret Wallace

FAMILY controversies and personal and business matters should be kept for discussion in the privacy of the family. It is seldom that strangers or even very intimate friends are interested in such discussions or at least do not feel embarrassment at being drawn into them.

It is sometimes necessary to discuss matters of a business nature or personal or controversial character among members of the family and even to call in friends and relatives for advice. But these discussions should be arranged to take place other than at the dinner table.

The member of the family who is always bringing up difficulties and problems at mealtime, whether guests are present or not, is guilty of a breach of manners.

If the family is disappointed and feels that Junior might have been promoted if he had applied himself better to his lessons or that he was granted too much indulgence in being permitted to stay at home, the dinner table is not the place to say so. Junior will not be a better boy by having the finger of scorn thus openly pointed at him. Mother will have her feelings hurt because she is criticized in public and everyone will find the meal much less enjoyable.

The discussion of personal affairs in public resulted in the loss of popularity of a woman in official life several Administrations ago. She felt that her husband had been unfairly treated. She brought up the subject whenever she could at luncheons, at teas and at dinner parties and even between the acts at the opera. She had been a favorite dinner guest, but her invitations decreased until hostesses wanted her no more.

Be Individual in Black and White

Black and White Combinations Called Ever Chic and Reliable

They Are Termed the Epitome of Individuality and Instinctiveness in a Season of Multitudinous Prints; Possibilities Many.

COLORS—flattering or unbecoming—flit across the fashion stage so rapidly that they leave you perplexed as to their smartness. But black and white combinations are ever chic and reliable. And in a season of multitudinous prints they are the epitome of individuality and distinctiveness.

Unlimited stylings and fabrics offer many possibilities for combining black and white. These are sheer crepes, chiffons, nets, organdies, organzas, piques, laces in black or white that can be combined effectively for evening attire. White boleros, jackets or capes add a striking contrast to an all-black dress of chiffon, lace or organdie. White appliqued on black or vice versa gives a note of Old World charm. White silk mousseline with bands of black Chantilly lace exploits eighteenth century quaintness. One very effective evening style is a black accordion-pleated skirt with white accordion-pleated blouse and varicolored sash. A black velvet girdle may be used to perk up an all-white dress.

Just now white tops with black dresses are very popular. The tops may be either blouse or jacket. They may be solid white, banded with black, or white trimmings. Dresses may be all-black, with all-white boleros, coats or jacket, or white blouses with black skirts. For those who prefer the prints, there are black dresses with white and black printed jackets or boleros, or printed dresses with either black or white coat.

White collars and cuffs can be used to brighten the black dress. Even a new white flower fivens up a dull black outfit. Black pocketbook and gloves with solid white or printed dresses provide the necessary contrast for distinctiveness. With a black dress the pocketbook and gloves may be white. And with black and white prints or polka dots, either black or white accessories may be worn for contrast. Gloves may be either cotton, silk or crocheted, depending upon the material of the dress.

The black and white motif is equally good for bathing suits, play suits and other beach wear. Tops may be either black or white.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

In Any Dieting Plan Calcium, Proteins and Minerals Must Be Included.

By Ida Jean Kain.

DIETING CAN be a very risky business. Unless you follow scientifically planned menus you are in danger of developing a vitamin and mineral deficiency, and no diet should ever be cut below 1,000 calories.

You can better appreciate the importance of these elements in the diet when you see what happens without them. As long as your diet is adequate in every respect except in calories, you do not endanger your health. You have, in the form of excess fat, a store of calories upon which to draw. There is no such reserve store of minerals, vitamins and protein.

We will suppose that your diet is lacking in calcium, as it would be if you failed to include eggs, milk or cheese in the reducing menus. Your body does not cooperate with you and use less calcium simply because you are not eating what you should. Your system must have calcium from somewhere, and one place to be affected may be your teeth.

Sufficient iron also is important in the daily diet, even though you are reducing. A deficiency of this mineral will lower the body's vigor and will cause you to feel tired most of the time. At best, our diet is apt to be low in iron, and the supply is further diminished in an unscientific reducing diet, or in the diet of the overweight who consumes large quantities of sugars and starches and fails to eat sufficient amounts of the green leafy vegetables and protein. Your rich sources of iron are eggs, vegetables and meats.

Protein, as I have told you before, is the very backbone of a reducing diet. Your diet must supply the complete protein foods—lean meat, eggs, milk and cheese. Although protein in varying amounts is supplied in other foods, such as breads, cereals and certain vegetables, the complete proteins are essential in the diet. This food element is used in the repair work of the body. All body tissues constantly undergo wear and tear, and as the tissues are worn out they must be repaired. That is where protein comes in. When adequate protein is not supplied by the diet, it is formed through the breaking down of muscular tissue.

The protective vitamins, necessary to high resistance and optimum health, cannot be left out of the daily menus. Therefore, your menus will furnish fresh fruits, fruit juices, vegetables, milk, butter, whole grains, for the vitamins.

By now you know that your calorie cut must be only in the sugars, starches and fats. Fat is the food you need the least, and it is the highest in calories.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

By Alice Hughes.

New York, June 17.

HOLLYWOOD'S misadventures may have put an end to diary-keeping among more mature members of the gay set, as a major sport, but many accidental diaries exist and are read not by reporters or district attorneys but by dry cleaners.

ALICE HUGHES

My informant on the matter is Phil Cooper, who for 30 years has been cleaning the clothes of the metropolitan area and removing spots that tell stories of enormous meals, carelessly-handled cocktails and even the romantic didoes of the young. Phil, an observant soul, is a wide and deep mine of information on clothes that come to his many stores for renovation.

"After the last Christmas holidays we must have taken about 5,000,000 spots from clothing," Phil says. "Soup spots always predominate on businessmen's suits, no doubt because they bolt their lunches." Of course, there are thousands of liquid spots, too, but Dr. Cooper does not pretend that he can say definitely what type of cocktail made them—even after a microscopic examination.

"Another regular, always found on the shoulders of men's coats, is face powder," says the good doctor. "Certain types of dancing now in favor with the young folks produce these smudges, which seem to be on the increase."

"We clean many more women's clothes than men's," Cooper opines. "Not because they get dirtier, but because they are more fastidious. And the middle class furnishes the bulk of our trade, for the maids and valets of the rich watch their clothing. The messiest person? Undoubtedly the man who has no woman to keep a close check on his appearance."

Interesting business, this. Remember that every little spot may have a meaning of its own to your dry cleaner—if he is as observant as our Bro. Cooper!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Some local wiseacres dare to say that we face a revival of grandma's bustle—which is so much posey. It was started by the arrival on Broadway of a dainty, lacy little operetta called "The Two Bouquets," which is as Victorian as the whatnot and horsehair sofa, but prettier. It's a little too fragile for summer Broadway wear, this show, but it is very pretty, and it drew a fancy crowd of first-nighters, including all the charter members of Saloon Society. But we need have no fear of bustles, that's certain. Our slimming struggles of the last 20 years have not gone for naught—we shall never again pad places we have fought to demolish! Yes?

* * * *

The good news along Broadway, as bootblack's fry their luncheon eggs on its sidewalks, is that Alice Brady may be lured back from Hollywood by her papa, William A., to appear in the dramatization of the Maugham novel, "Theater." A magnificent actress, she is. Bill Brady also keeps his wonderful wife, Grace George, busy. She has just closed in the revival of "The Circle."

The GENTLER SEX

Bringing Home the Bacon.

"Any news downtown today?"

"Not a thing."

"Didn't you see anybody you knew?"

"No, and I wasn't looking for anybody. Say, I worked hard today. I didn't have any time to stand around and gossip."

"I did see Bill a minute in the drug store."

"Did he know anything new?"

"Not a thing. Well, to tell you the truth, we just talked business. Anyway, he was in a hurry. His wife was leaving for New York."

"For a visit?"

"Not exactly. Now say, I wouldn't want you to say anything about this, but her sister——"

"Yes, Effie Swift——"

"Well she tried to shoot herself in some night club over a man——"

"No! Not Effie Swift!"

"Wait now, don't get excited. And I don't want you telling all the gossips about it. Bill was talking confidential."

"Who was the man?"

"I don't know. I couldn't ask him a personal question like that."

"Well what else did he say about it?"

"That was all. Somebody came up while we were talking—it was Sam Finch—and he didn't say anything more."

"What's the news with Sam?"

"Nothing. We were just talking politics."

"Didn't he say anything about his divorce?"

"Well, he said his wife had gone to Reno. You know he told me something that was certainly a surprise to me."

"What?"

"Well now, I wouldn't want to say anything about this, especially not before any women gossips, but just as soon as his wife gets a divorce she's going to marry Dr. George Nutter."

"What? Why he's married!"

"Yes, but his wife's in Reno, too."

"Of all things, I'd never thought that of Dr. Nutter."

"You never can tell about human nature. I was certainly surprised at something I saw today."

"What?"

"Well, I wouldn't want you to mention this—especially not before any woman—but I was in the hotel a minute to see a fellow about a deal and who do you guess I saw in the cocktail lounge together? Marjorie Trotter and George Goode!"

"Of ALL things. And George with that new baby!"

"Now, mind you, I don't want this spread around. But they certainly were there. What's more, I noticed 'em as they came out and they went away in a taxicab together."

"Did they seem — well, you know . . .?"

"Well, to tell the truth, I didn't notice. You see I ran onto old Tom Gabb about that time. Say, he was certainly glad to see me. He must have talked three-quarters of an hour."

"Did he know anything?"

"No, we just talked about old times, mostly. He was in a hurry. He was on his way to file a big suit——"

"What kind of a suit?"

"Well, of course, he was talking confidentially, but it seems this Mrs. Wigglebaum——"

"Not Mrs. Percy Wigglebaum?"

"That's the one. Well, she's suing Senator Tapp's wife for $50,000 for alienation of affections."

"Why—Why—Why! It can't be! Why, Mrs. Tapp—she belongs to the Garden Women! And the Runnymede Dames. And the——"

"Say, you'd be surprised if I told you some things about Mrs. Tapp. Now, I don't want you to say anything about this, but I've seen her several times downtown with an elderly man with a gold-headed cane."

"Mrs. Tapp, of all people! Well, what else did he say about it?"

"Nothing. I didn't talk to him long and I didn't want to get too personal. Besides, I'm not like a woman. I don't have time to stand around and gossip."

Drowning 'Superstition.'

Once a week in this column will be printed a discussion of a medical superstition. Readers are invited to contribute.

"That a drowned person arises to the surface of the water three times before finally sinking."

This belief is widely held, the idea being that drowning people still are alive when they arise for the third time.

The specific gravity of the body is slightly heavier than that of water, hence there is a tendency for the body to sink. It is only the chest, with the air-containing lungs, that is lighter than the water.

The drowning person in the water, as long as he retains consciousness, will struggle to get to the surface in order to breathe. In the effort of breathing he is likely to inhale water into the windpipe and lungs, which increases his weight and causes him to sink again. The alternate rising to the surface and sinking may take place several times before death intervenes. There is certainly no rule of three about it, and as soon as sensibility and reflex motions are lost the final sinking occurs.

Death from drowning occurs from the reflex action of the water on the lungs, stopping respiration. The old idea that a drowning person should have the water pumped out of the lungs is entirely wrong, because a very small amount of water may induce death from drowning.

The treatment of drowning should be artificial respiration, kept up for an indefinite period, at least as long as three or four hours. Recovery has been known to take place after four hours of artificial respiration, during which time life is apparently completely suspended.

The proper method of artificial respiration is the prone pressure maneuver. The one known to most people is the old Silvester method of putting the patient on the back and draising the arms forcibly over the head. It is probably the least effective of all methods of artificial respiration.

parted by the right. Three of the 13 ushers were not present. Nathaniel Clark will arrive from New York in the morning. Eldridge Jackson and Tommy Husband are flying down from New York in time to attend the dinner at 8 o'clock tonight on The Potomac.

While Anne Lindsay Clark is defying most wedding superstitions, she is abiding by two. She will not see her future husband tomorrow until time for the wedding, and her bridal ensemble will have in it "something old, something new, something borrowed and something blue." The dress and veil will be the "something new." The "something old, borrowed and blue" will be a sapphire bracelet that belongs to Mrs. Clark.

As to where he will go on his wedding trip, John Roosevelt flatly refused to say. "Before we get on the boat, all of you will have plenty of warning," he said at his press conference. "That's all I'll say about it."

Following the dinner on The Potomac tonight, members of the wedding party will attend the regular Friday evening dance at the Nahant Tennis Club. It will be a black-tie affair. Tomorrow John Roosevelt plans to sleep late and take it easy until time for the wedding.

Meanwhile Nahant has been a beehive of activity since this morning when the President's yacht, pulling out from the wharf at Salem, sailed over to within sight of the village that will go on the map in a big way tomorrow. The President's train, arriving at Salem around 10:30 o'clock this morning, was met by thousands of natives whose applause greeted the Chief Executive when he alighted and climbed in the automobile awaiting him.

He rode directly to the Salem Terminal Wharf through a part of the town that was anything but scenic. As one of the town leaders explained it, "The route isn't pretty, but it's right through the part where the Democratic votes come from."

Meeting the President and members of his party at Salem Wharf was John Roosevelt, his fiancee, Charles McVeigh and Miss Sally Clark, whose dark bobbed hair with blondined strips at either side attracted much attention. Going aboard The Potomac with the President, in addition to those just mentioned, were his uncle, Frederic A. Delano, who accompanied him from Washington; Major Henry Hooker, of New York, who boarded the President's train in New York, and Miss Marguerite Le Hand.

Harry Hopkins, Federal WPA administrator, who also was on the President's train, did not board the Potomac. Instead, he accompanied other members of the President's party to Swampscott, where he registered at the New Ocean House. This afternoon he went to the races.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who left Washington last night accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt, arrived in Boston early this morning and drove at once to Framingham, Mass., where she had breakfast with Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt at their farm. Also at the breakfast were Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt, and Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger. This afternoon, Mrs. Roosevelt met her mother-in-law, Mrs. Sarah Delano Roosevelt and Mrs. Boettiger's son and daughter at the Statler Hotel. John Roosevelt will not see his mother until he meets her at the dinner on the Potomac tonight. She will return to Boston after the dinner and drive back to Nahant tomorrow morning.

Twenty-four Roosevelts are expected to attend the wedding, and this number does not include those who have other married names—such as Anna Roosevelt Boettiger. The official list of guests, approximately 800, includes scores of socially registered families in Boston, New York, Delaware and Washington. Only two members of the Cabinet—the Secretary of the Treasury, Henry A. Morgenthau, jr., and the Postmaster General, James A. Farley—will be present. Each will be accompanied by his wife.

According to 69-year-old Thomas H. Larkin, chief of police here, "the crowd won't be half as big as everybody seems to think. I predict there won't be more than 50,000 people here. I've read that 250,000 were expected." Larkin, who has been on the force for 42 years, was a bicycle escort for Theodore Roosevelt when the latter visited Nahant in 1902.

Two hundred police will be on duty in and around here tomorrow, Larkin said. Fourteen of these are the regular Nahant force. Others are Boston metropolitan police and State police. Early tomorrow morning, the road to Lynn, Mass., will be a one-way affair leading from Nahant. Spring road, a wider thoroughfare, will be one-way leading into the town.

Parking space for 5,000 cars has been reserved on the outskirts of the town, and from there persons will have to walk some 3 miles to the church unless they have stickers on their automobiles—green, if they are members of the press; orange, if they are wedding guests, and pink if they are residents of Nahant.

Church decorations, although not yet complete, will be extremely simple. There are to be no candles on the altar, which is to be banked with cymbodium ferns and white blossoms—peonies, roses and carnations.

The Union Church, of Nahant, frequently called the old Boston Church, because it has long been attended by summer residents from Boston, is one of the three religious meetinghouses here. The Catholic Church and the Nahant Village Church are the other two.

Down the two matting-covered aisles of the quaint stone church will walk the wedding party at noon tomorrow. As they stand before the altar to exchange their vows, two flags—the Stars and the Stripes, and the fringed white and blue Massachusetts banner—will hang above them.

An ancient organ with blue and brown pipes and somewhat unusual decorations, including black and gold elephants, heads and apples, will furnish music for the wedding. Installed in 1879, it works with a hand pump and still carries brackets on each side holding oil lamps.

In contrast to the church that is well into its second century is the new, modernistic stucco dwelling of Mrs. F. Haven Clark not far away. It is there that America's number one sweethearts for 1938 are staying, and it was to that house, which in its newness and style seems strangely out of place in this picturesque town, that hundreds of tourists walked today in hopes of catching a glimpse of John Roosevelt and Anne Lindsay Clark.

The Nahant Tennis Club, where lawn tennis had its debut in this country in 1876, is also a center of interest for visitors converging on the town. A huge white canopy is stretched to one side of the club to accommodate the guests. Decorated with cedars, palms, peonies and roses, it will be the setting for refreshment tables for most of the 800 guests.

Members of the wedding party, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt and the bride's mother, Mrs. Clark will receive in a small room just off the ballroom. The President will sit in a huge wicker chair that belongs to the superintendent of the club. Others in the reception line will stand before the fern-banked fireplace and along the wall which it centers. Dancing to the music of Reby Newman's orchestra will take place in a comparatively small dance hall in which the central decoration is a huge porcelain stove. The dining room, where the wedding party will be served, has as its decorative motif 10 stuffed heads—deer and moose—jutting out at regular intervals around the top of the wall.

The other attendants, in addition to Miss Hebe Reynolds and Miss Marjorie Nye, were Miss Andrea Sterling, Miss Dorothy McMurray and Mrs. E. C. The monthly bulletin of the federation, containing the program for the meetings, is issued under the supervision of the publicity department.

Yearbook Committee Also to Be Named

Three members of the yearbook committee will be appointed by the members ex-officio, who are Mrs. Daniels, president; Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, retiring president, and Mrs. Ruth Snodgrass, incoming second vice president, who is chairman of the group. Each of the members ex-officio appoint one of the other three. These appointments also are to be announced at the meeting Monday and the committee will meet during the summer to prepare the yearbook for distribution by next November. It will serve the federation for the three years of the new president's administration.

The department heads, under the federation by-laws, must represent nine different clubs, no two departments being permitted to be under the direction of members from the same organization. Committee chairmen and members, however, are not thus restricted.

Mrs. Ellis Logan, president of the Sabbath Alliance and past president of the Federation, and Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt, president of the Political Study Club and also a former federation president, were guests of honor at yesterday's meeting and assisted the hostess at tea. Also assisting was Mrs. A. B. McManus, president of the Baby Lovers Circle of Florence Crittenton Home. The table was decorated with pink and blue larkspur.

Others present included the new federation officers; Mrs. La Verne Beales, first vice president; Mrs. Ruth Snodgrass, second vice president; Mrs. A. A. Ludwig, recording secretary; Mrs. Henry Fenno Sawtelle, treasurer; Mrs. Charles C. Keyser, the auditor, and Mrs. Biddle who, on Monday, retires as District president and assumes her duties as director to the General Federation.

Bedtime Stories

THE CAVE DWELLERS.

Who really sees you'll always find
—Old Mother Nature.

What Old Mother Nature means is that a great many people, perhaps most people, see things with their eyes but not with their minds. They are like a camera without a film; the lens sees whatever it is pointed at but what it sees is not recorded. It is surprising how many people are just like that. That is why Old Mother Nature so often is not understood, or is misunderstood.

Sue and Sammy had seen for the first time the queer little clay nurseries of the Potter Wasp, shaped like fairy water bottles or jugs, and firmly cemented to a twig. They had seen Mrs. Potter take a caterpillar into one and then seal it up. Tommy, their cousin, who had lived all his life on a farm, had told them that she was storing food for the use of the baby wasp who would presently hatch from an egg that was also sealed in there. "At first the baby is a little white grub. It eats the caterpillars and then spins a cocoon in which it changes into a wasp just like its mother," explained Tommy.

"But how does it get out if it is all sealed up in there?" Sammy wanted to know.

"Cuts its way out with its jaws," replied Tommy.

"There may not be any really, truly fairyland, but if there was I guess there wouldn't be anything more wonderful," said Sue as the three made their way home. "Don't those wasps eat anything but caterpillars, Tommy?"

"I've never seen Mrs. Potter bring home anything but caterpillars," replied Tommy, "but she has cousins who don't go in for caterpillar steak at all in so far as I know. Anyway I've never seen the Cave Dwellers with caterpillars and I've watched them often."

"Cave Dwellers! What are you talking about?" demanded Sammy.

Tommy's freckled face was lighted with a grin. "Most folks call 'em Mud Daubers but I like Cave Dwellers better. They belong to the Solitary Wasps the same as Mrs. Potter does."

"Meaning what?" Sammy wanted to know.

"That they live and work alone, not in colonies like the wasps that make those big paper nests. When we get to the house I'll show you the caves of one," replied Tommy.

So when the house was reached he led the others around to one side and pointed to a small mass of mud plastered on the bricks of the foundation. "There are the caves and there is the maker of them," said he as a slim-bodied black wasp alighted on the bricks and went to work on an unfinished cell, continually jerking her wings and turning around.

They had seen Mrs. Potter take a caterpillar into one and seal it up.

Examination showed that the somewhat shapeless mass of mud consisted of a number of tubes adjoining, rough outside but, as could be seen by the unfinished one, smooth inside. They were made of mud worked into a sort of cement. Each tube or cave was about an inch long. All were sealed but the one Mrs. Cave Dweller was at work on.

"I don't suppose I should call her Mrs. Cave Dweller for she doesn't live in one of her caves. But her children do, and she was born in one. Somehow whenever I see one of these mud homes I am reminded of the real Cave Dwellers and how they lived and so whenever I see one of these wasps I call her Mrs. Cave Dweller," explained Tommy.

"I think it is a splendid name; it just fits," declared Sue. "Does she fill her caves with caterpillars? I suppose she does."

"That is for you to find out," grinned Tommy, and by his very refusal to tell he aroused her curiosity.

The very next day Sue recognized Mrs. Cave Dweller flying about in a shed. She visited every nook and corner. Even as Sue watched she pounced on something and a moment later flew away carrying a victim. It was a spider. Sue ran around the house and squatted down in front of the mud home on the brick foundation. Five times while she watched Mrs. Cave Dweller stowed away a spider in the still open cell. She brought nothing but spiders, not a single caterpillar. Finally the cell was sealed.

Legalities Block Warrings' Trial

Legal technicalties and approaching the end of the court term may combine to force over until next fall trial of the three Warring brothers and two accountants on an indictment charging them with conspiring to defraud the Government on income tax reports, it was indicated in District Court yesterday. The brothers and their tax consultants were to have been tried next week.

The delay, it was explained was because a demurrer to the indictment of Charles Warring yet has to be acted upon. Demurrers of the other brothers, Emmett R., and Paul Warring, already have been denied.

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Commissioner Lucille Foster McMillin becomes a successful author. Her recent book, "Women in the Federal Service," goes to a second printing and the demand is still increasing. Women's clubs, in particular, are requesting copies, one asking that 500 copies be printed for the club at its own expense. An interesting sidelight is how Commissioner McMillin's modesty restrained her from signing the book . . .

Editor Samuel M. Barrett, of the I. D. R. A. News, issues a plea: "Committee members who send items to the editor are urged to get correct spelling of individual's names. Who is John Wilkerson? In this instance we have to guess that you mean John Wilkinson. There is quite a difference between Stinson and Stenson. The member with the 'i' in his name is tall, while our musical impresario with the 'e' in his name is slightly stouter. "Please get names correct." Every newspaperman in America sympathizes and seconds you, Sam. For nothing so fills the day with gloom as to pick up a telephone receiver and hear someone shout: "Say, my name is Simson, not Samson!"

The popular Agriculture Chorus will be heard tomorrow evening at the Sunday night program of the 4-H Club encampment. Robert Frederick Freund will direct and Victor Neal will be at the piano. Committee chairmen are: Hilda G. Nelson, membership; Leonard Kephart, stage and decorations; Alpha G. Knight, social, and Irene L. Bartlett, publicity.

Nine employes recently retired from the Government Printing Office, as follows: Harry E. Haigley, compositor, 4320 Alabama avenue southeast, 20 years' service; Robert B. Horn, compositor, 15 Randolph place northwest, 18 years; Harry B. Kinner, machinist, 2914 Thirty-fourth street, Mt. Rainier, Md., 34 years; Benjamin A. Ratterree, proofreader, 13 R street northeast, 21 years; James C. Roy, unskilled laborer, 232 Seventh street southeast, 25 years; William Schinnerer, foreman, 3637 Warren street northwest, 44 years; Alice I. Siddall, proofreader, 514 Nineteenth street northwest, 15 years; John A. Stanton, monotype machinist's helper, 1306 Franklin street northeast, 32 years, and John P. Yenney, unskilled laborer, 810 North Capitol street, 27 years' service.

"Museum Shows Ascent of Man to Present Day"—Headline in the Government Standard. It gives a thought! How about some of us arranging a museum showing the lack of ascent made by a majority of civil service employes in the Federal service. For the absence of ascent there is the most notable thing about it. And after the museum is set up with appropriate exhibits, we'll invite all the Congressmen who have been either hostile or indifferent to an automatic promotions system.

F. D. R.'s first oratorical flight of the year was his response to Glenn Frank's speech at the Gridiron Dinner, and it's a pity it isn't released for publication . . . Unable to get enough time on the House floor, a Congressman addressed a series of radio talks to "Mr. Speaker and fellow members." . . . A member of the Cabinet engaged in a spirited exchange of compliments with the Chief Justice . . . With triple emphasis, F. D. R. disclaimed any yen for dictatorship . . . The rugged individualists settled down grimly to telling each other Roosevelt jokes.

For heroic action in defending American guns at Tientsin, China, last year, Maj. William F. Lee, of Fort Washington, Md., and Private Dale W. Waldron, of Tazewell, Va., yesterday were awarded the Soldier's Medal by the War Department.

Maj. Lee, whose home is at Amherst, Mass., and Waldron, a gun sergeant stationed at Fort Lewis, Wash., were among three officers and nine enlisted men of the Fifteenth Infantry honored by the War Department. For 14 hours they guarded a freight car carrying machine guns, ammunition and other Army property in Tientsin in July; they were cut off from the rest of Tientsin and the car was repeatedly hit in action between Chinese and Japanese troops.

Others awarded medals were Capt. Richard G. Thomas, jr., Fort Lewis, Wash., and Lieut. Joseph W. Stilwell, jr., Fort Benning, Ga.; Corpl. Alfred P. Delaire, Privates Glenn D. Cohee, Harold G. Sawyer, Arthur J. Brookway, Alvin E. Hinrichsen, Kenneth C. Platt, Merle J. Pyle and Armand A. Roy, all stationed at Fort Lewis.

Annuity Left D. C. Woman By Employer

MISS MARTINA BROHAUGH.

Miss Martina Brohaugh, 77, for 50 years housekeeper for the late the Rev. G. E. MacLean, has been awarded an annuity of "from $25 to $50 a month" for the rest of her life—provided she does not marry, the Associated Press reported from New York City yesterday.

According to her employer's will, filed for probate yesterday, Miss Brohaugh will receive the pension only so long as she remains unmarried, "in order to protect her from being married for her money."

Last night Miss Brohaugh, who lives here at 1721 P street northwest, in the house where Dr. MacLean died May 3, said she was sure the clause was "all in fun." She said it was typical of Dr. MacLean's humor, and denied she had any intention of disqualifying herself. In the testament, she is described as "my wife's good and faithful servant and my stand-by in my last days."

The rest of the estate, valued at "more than $20,000," is to go to relatives in Brooklyn, Minneapolis and Pittsfield, Mass. Dr. MacLean was chancellor of the University of Nebraska from 1895 to 1899, when he became president of the State University of Iowa.

Finnan Fears Avenue Ruin By Underpass

Peril to Massachusetts Seen as Board Votes Progress Plans.

Progress plans for construction of a vehicular tunnel at Thomas Circle were approved yesterday by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission after it listened to a plea for a comprehensive study of the traffic problem before ground is broken.

A warning that the tunnel may increase the volume of traffic on Massachusetts avenue to such an extent that character of the thoroughfare may be injured was given by C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks.

The parks office is responsible for maintenance and policing of Thomas and all other circles.

See Trees Cut Down.

Although he did not come out in definite opposition to the underpass, Finnan urged the planners to weigh carefully long-range aspects of the project, reminding them that Massachusetts avenue is one of the Capital's most distinctive thoroughfares.

He said he envisages, if the tunnel is dug, such an increase in the avenue's traffic burden that ultimately it may be necessary to widen it for its entire length to accommodate the flow. This would necessitate chopping down hundreds of linden trees.

Washington's traffic puzzle cannot and will not be solved by such piecemeal measures as a Thomas Circle vehicular tunnel, Finnan said, but rather calls for an exhaustive study of the problem as a whole. He pointed out that, as far as Massachusetts avenue is concerned, the most serious tieups occur not at Thomas or any of the other circles but at the public library intersection at Seventh and Ninth streets.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District highway director who, with Engineer Commissioner Dan I. Sultan, laid the tunnel plans before the commission yesterday, scouted Finnan's arguments.

"The public may be assured that the proposal has had long, careful, serious consideration," he declared. "The progress plans were approved in April, May and again today by the planning commission.

"The project also bears approval of the Fine Arts Commission and Traffic Director William A. Van-Duzer. It came up several times before the co-ordinating committee, of which Mr. Finnan is a member, and I don't remember his ever having objected before."

Municipal Center Approved.

Vehicular tunnels at key circles have been under study since 1930, he continued, pointing out that—contrary to Finnan's assertion—the Thomas Circle scheme was investigated just as carefully as the earlier plan to build the tunnel at Dupont Circle.

Congress this year, after first deciding to erect the tunnel at Dupont, subsequently switched to Thomas and included $530,000 in the 1939 supply bill to finance the work. Capt. Whitehurst said it may take two or three months to draft working specifications for the project.

Approved a court condemnation order which clears away the last obstacle to public ownership of the entire Banneker Recreation Center, paving the way toward construction of a new colored junior high school at one corner of the site.

Voted to request owners of property on and adjacent to Conduit road to take steps toward providing a border road for substitute use when Conduit road is taken over as a link in the George Washington Memorial Parkway.

D. C. Sympathizers Gather Around Rice Bowls at Raleigh.

More than 500 Washingtonians danced last night and gathered around tables bearing dishes of the Orient so that countless millions of Chinese refugees might eat and find shelter in the shell-torn Far East.

Occasion was the Bowl of Rice Party, given at the Raleigh Hotel by the United Council for Civilian Relief in China, of which John M. Baer is chairman and T. Hunton Leith, treasurer.

Most of the staff of the Chinese Embassy attended, along with a large group of Chinese students in the District and their friends. Dr. Chengting T. Wang, the Ambassador, was in New York.

In reality, there were two parties—one the general ball on the entire tenth floor of the hotel, and the other the supper dance, in the Pall Mall room.

The daughters of the Ambassador, Yoeh E. Wang and An Fu Wang, attended the affair. Entertainment was furnished by the floor show of the Lotus Club, lent for the occasion.

As evening gowns swished, and many Washingtonians prominent socially went to the party, plates were passed in Chinatown, where proprietors of the restaurants solicited their native customers for contributions to the cause.

Ban Rescinded On Association Of Taxi Drivers

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday rescinded the ban it laid down last year upon formation of new taxicab associations.

As enacted by Congress, the new taxicab liability insurance law permits a blanket policy, not to exceed $75,000, to cover any corporation or association of taxicabs.

Officials of the commission explained that small companies and independent drivers, who would have to pay a rate estimated at $300 for insurance, would reduce this fee to about $75 by forming new companies under the law.

"We want to place all drivers of cabs on an equal basis," Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the commission, said. "And we don't want to be placed in a position where we would have to tell the independent drivers to join one of the existing 18 associations."

Last July the commission prohibited the formation of any new taxicab associations. Prior to this time associations could be formed if they enrolled at least 100 members. This same stipulation will hold now, Keech said.

Col. Hayden Manager of D. C. Health

Lieut. Col. Herbert Bainbridge Hayden, U. S. A., retired, was appointed yesterday to fill the newly created position of business manager of the District's health department.

Col. Hayden, a resident of the District for 25 years, will receive an annual salary of $5,600. His appointment by the District Commissioners was recommended by Health Officer George C. Ruhland. The new official lives at 3316 N street northwest.

Agitation for the creation of the post was begun early this year when Chairman Ross Collins, of the House District sub-committee on appropriations criticized the health department on expenditures. He recommended a business manager for the department to supervise the operation of the municipal hospitals.

When the supply bill for the District was passed it contained an appropriation of $5,600 for a health department business manager.

An honor graduate of West Point in 1907, Col. Hayden has served there on the athletic committee. Following his graduation he joined the Infantry and in 1909 went to the Field Artillery. In 1914 he graduated from the Mounted Service School. During the World War he served as major in the Field Artillery. Wounded in the war, Col. Hayden was retired in June, 1920.

In his communication to the Commissioners recommending Hayden, Dr. Ruhland said the new business manager had had a great deal of training in financial matters at Yale, Columbia, Babson Institute and Pace Institute.

Girl, 19, Threatens Plunge to Street; Officers Save Her

While firemen stretched a safety net beneath a second-story window, police last night dragged Dorothy Collins, 19, 3800 Fourteenth street northwest away from the window from which she was threatening to jump. She was taken to Gallinger Hospital for observation.

Police and firemen simultaneously answered the call that someone was trying to jump from the apartment building at her address. Men from No. 6 Truck Company held the net until police pulled her to safety.

'Holiday' Has A Repeat Week On Met Screen

Hepburn and Grant Score Again in Costellar Roles of Hit.

If anyone has had a word to say against Katharine Hepburn, now is the time to be a sport and retract. In "Holiday," returned to the Met this week, she turns in even a finer and more moving performance than in "Morning Glory," the picture that made her a star.

"Holiday" is by way of being something of a classic in the cinema. It was first made by Ann Harding and the late Robert Ames. With due respect to the Harding beauty and ability, the Hepburn hangs it all over her in warmth and sensitivity of interpretation. As for Cary Grant, he's good—but we still remember Roberts Ames' idea of the part as smoother and more ingratiating. But these are the thoughts of a long-time moviegoer. Be sure they are just thoughts, not criticism of a rarely thought-provoking picture.

Not so often do a good story and its proper players meet as in "Holiday." The theme is that of the girl reared and smothered in gold-plated surroundings. She's a daisy propagated in a hot house. Those of us poor people who have been privileged (?) to associate with some of the less perspective 18-karat population, know that it's better to live in a piano box on a vacant lot than in the more stupefying atmosphere of certain gilded homes. This is the thought that made "Holiday" and gives Kathie Hepburn the chance (royally lived up to) of being a real and lovable star.

Wealth vs. Leisure.

Reducing it to plot, "Holiday" is the tale of the Seton family of bankers and its latest scions, Hepburn, who can't find room to breathe; her sister, Doris Nolan, a natural-born daughter of the family; the son, Lew Ayres, who takes refuge in alcohol; Cary Grant, who first falls in love with Doris, then finds that he truly loves the visionary Katharine. There's nothing like the attraction of nuts for nuts. For it turns out that Cary isn't really interested in making money just to get money—the dope just wants to get money enough to vacation until he makes up his mind about what he really wants to do. This sacrilegious thought completely alienates his first true-love, Doris, and completely attracts Kathie, charming screw-ball that she is. It ends, you know, with them both doing a happy hand-stand and with the prospect of children who will all turn out to be acrobats.

For sheer performance Hepburn is nothing short of grand. Gone is the affectation, the chirping, the high school dramatics and comes a really human and lovely creature demanding sympathy and affection.

And there's no guessing about Lew Ayres. He has a tough part as the alcoholic young play-boy, brother of Kathie. You'll like him, sober or squeegeed. He belongs as a leading man. Also to be praised are Doris Nolan and Henry Kolker as daughter and father of the Seton banking family. They're nice people, too, of the sort that have granite in their souls and, naturally, can't understand such folks as Kathie and Cary.

There are a smart newsreel and a smarter orchestral short by Clyde Lucas, offering contrasted music types, on the bill. M. H.

Columbia

"Doctor Rhythm," back at the Columbia this week, was made from an O. Henry short story, and it is entirely within reason that he would have approved of the changes it received in its movie doctoring. He was one for gently satiric punches and parlor slapstick, you remember. Beatrice Lillie and Harry L. (Bing) Crosby attend to that. For the rest, there is a diverting scampering around in an unflurried manner which is all very pleasant.

Bing is a society doctor and Andy Devine his policeman pal. Andy gets bitten by a sealion and Bing pinch-hits for him on a bodyguarding mission. Since dainty Mary Carlisle is his assignment, it is no strain at all for Bing to trail her.

The incomparable Lilllie is Mary's aunt, which is license for some fancy scat-singing and hi-de-ho-ing by Lady Bea, who is as good on skates and she is sliding down banisters. Bing has enough songs to make you anxious for him to sing again.

Mark this one as being fine for summertime. It will jar nothing but your funnybone.

"The Lone Ranger," amid a salvo of hurrahs from the audience, rides in for another episode. In the newsreel are divers shot, none particularly intriguing. A crime-does-not-pay short is devoted to exposing of bad construction work in some large cities. S. S.

Trans-Lux

Scenes of Congress speeding adjournment, with party leaders discussing the accomplishments of the past session, are paramount in the current news section of the bill at the Trans-Lux Theater. To thrill the ladies are shots from West Point, as diplomas are handed out by Secretary of War Woodring. Agriculture and logging bring interesting views, and the ladies are further treated to a New York preview of beach styles.

Finis is depicted in the Cash kidnaping, as McCall is arraigned in Florida. For the kiddies are exciting scenes, as Coney Island and all its wonders open for the season.

Summer wear for milady is displayed, and there are shots of a 62-year-old parachute jumper. For big laughs, as usual, Lew Lehr with a baby Hercules weighing 25 pounds.

For sport fans, there is everything from tennis, auto-racing and aquaplaning at Spring Lake, to skiing at Mount Hood. Also in the sport section you have night baseball at Ebbets Field, sand yachting on the hot deserts of Egypt, motorbike stunting in England and a wrestling bout at Fort Hamilton, Brooklyn.

The short subjects are exceptionally fine this week, with a beautiful travelog of Mexico, a "Popular Science" special, and a sport special captioned "A Fascinating Adventure." The Disney cartoon for the week is a scream, as Donald Duck cavorts with his nephews.

An interesting added feature, running only until and including Tuesday, June 21, is an official film from the National 4-H Club, called "I Pledge My Heart."

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

'Blockade' Combines Thrills and a Plea, at Capitol; Bogart and 'Dead End' Kids Star on Earle Screen

"BLOCKADE." Walter Wanger's picturization for United Artists of a romantic melodrama of the Spanish Civil War, costarring Madeleine Carroll and Henry Fonda, with Leo Carrillo, John Halliday, Reginald Denny, Vladimir Sokoloff, Robert Warwick, William Davidson, Carlos de Valdez, Peter Godfrey, Katherine De Mille, Lupita Tovar, and Fred Kohler. Directed by William Dieterle. Previewed Monday, June 13, at Loew's Capitol Theater.

There is more than a little anguish in "Blackade," but there is more than a little excitement and suspense in it, too.

BELL.

These divergent elements of drama are welded together in a screen story that serves a double purpose. The excitement and suspense provide the usual entertainment to be enjoyed by those who are thrilled by romance sprouting through the debris of bombed buildings in a Spanish fighting war zone; the anguish is utilized to point the horror of that type of modern warfare that draws no line of demarcation between the soldiers in the field and innocent noncombatants—largely elderly women, small children and old men—whose lives are snuffed out with all of the exquisite brutality of mass murder.

In fairness to Producer Walter Wanger, it must be said that the portions of his picture dedicated to melodramatic entertainment, and the war of wits waged between a young lieutenant and a clever band of master spies and plotters, outweigh the drab scenes that express a powerful and articulate revulsion at guerrilla methods of armed conflict prevalent on too many fronts today.

Reaches Strong Climax.

The movement of the drama pursues a cumulative course of dramatic incident and horror, culminating in the running of a flood blockade by a supply ship that saves a town from starvation. This is the climax of the story that binds the two segments of the dramatic narrative most closely together. It is the episode, also, that marks the culmination of the strange romance that has sprung up between Marco, the simple lad of the fields, and Norma, the beautiful accomplice of the espionage experts and gun-runners, who finally is diverted from her treacherous enterprises by love and a realization of the sorry state in which the world has been plunged by the very sort of activity in which she has been engaged.

Hedging about these major ramifications of plot, with their twofold purposes, are many intervals of byplay and occasional interjections of comedy. Much of this relief from the more sanguinary periods of the play are due to the presence in the cast of Leo Carrillo, in the role of an idealistic sheep herder, who still is a patriot at heart.

There is also Peter Godfrey, a Britisher of some renown, who deserts his post of dialogue director long enough to perform some baffling feats of sleight-of-hand for the confusion of the gullible peasants gathered in a public house. His efforts to gain their confidence and their secrets, in the end, prove of no avail.

Sherman Said It!

Under the direction of William Dieterle, "Blockade" goes more or less thoroughly into the matter of bombing defenseless villages. These scenes do not present a pretty picture. They do, however, supply the background for the budding attachment that is beginning to spring up between two avowed enemies. There is little love lost between Norma and Marco in the beginning. He has just been compelled to kill her father, one of the arch conspirators intent only on getting rich out of an illicit traffic in arms and state secrets.

These are the roles played by Madeleine Carroll and Henry Fonda, both of whom contrive to lend something of sincerity to parts a little more violent than they are accustomed to play. Carrillo, the only one in the cast affecting an accent, acquits himself with customary proficiency and John Halliday and Robert Warwick make a precious pair of traitors to every decent human precept. Happily, they come to no good end, although one does not have the pleasure of seeing them lined up in front of the firing squad.

Some of the most convincing actors in the play are to be found among the silent crowds that stand helpless, waiting for food that doesn't come until almost too late. A very small baby, better than anyone else, typifies the inhuman nature of present-day war by contributing some of the most natural and pathetic acting the film can boast.

"Blockade," as has been said, is not a pretty picture—after its introductory sequences of a beautiful pastoral countryside—but it is an important one that deserves to be seen.

Draper Stars on Stage.

The stage bill at the Capitol this weeks seems not to stick together quite as it should. The acts are singly competent enough, but are as individually isolated as a man in solitary confinement, despite the efforts of Wally Ward to lend them something of homogeneity as master of ceremonies.

Chester Hale's 24 "Texas Comets" a line of skilful precision dancers, open the bill and punctuate its progress in diversified routines. Mark Plant, the Tarzan of "Jubilee," displays a robust barytone voice in a series of songs such as all barytones like to sing—"Good Green Acres of Home," "I Can Dream, Can't I?" "Drums," "Without a Song," and the like. Wally Ward, midway of the goings-on, teams with Mitzi Millford in a piano-and-song interlude that was better than it was recognized as being yesterday afternoon.

In the headline niche is Paul Draper, foremast of the American male dancers, who demonstrates how tap dancing can be adapted to classic technique. He even tapdances to a Handel minuet composed in 1735, and to the late George Gershwin's "It Ain't Necessarily So," from "Porgy and Bess." Mr. Draper is an artist.

He Reforms in Reformatory Film

one of the screen's most sinister "bad men," who this week does a right-about-face and impersonates a helpful young welfare commissioner in "Crime School," major film attraction at the Earle Theater. He has plenty to work on with the "Dead End" kids in the cast, making life as difficult as possible for him and his associates in the task of rehabilitation.

'Crime School' Perfect Vehicle for Youths; Krupa Is Riot.

If there are six more perfect embodiments of the big city hoodlum type of youngster than the "Dead End" kids, they must still be plying their embryonic thuggery in the slums of some great city. They never have found their way to either the stage or screen. The "Dead End" kids, so-called in honor of the vehicle of their first appearance before the public, have reached both. That is why "Dead End" was so excellent a play on the stage as well as on the screen, and why "Crime School" possesses more than the ordinary appeal of a run-of-the-mine drama of incorrigible youth.

These lusty young men, of course, are Billy Halop, Bobby Jordan, Leo Gorcey, Gabriel Dell, Huntz Hall and Bernard Punsley. Each is an actor born, as well as a comedian who can impart humor to the grimest of speeches. Their talents, individually and collectively, are given freeply and considerable "punch" in "Crime School."

Like the underprivileged lads in "The Devil Is a Sissy" and "Boy of the Streets," this marauding sextet is plotting new infringements of the law as the picture opens. They have found a "fence" who will pay them practically nothing for valuable articles they steal—automobile tires, radio sets, bathtubs and whatnot. In an altercation over the price of their plunder, they slug "Junkie" and leave him for dead. Taken into custody by the "cop on the beat," they are sentenced by an understanding juvenile court judge to a term in the Gatesville Reformatory.

They Get Their Man.

The reformatory is presided over by a couple of overweight bullies who deem acute physical punishment the only way to handle refractory kids. The newly appointed assistant commissioner of correction has other ideas. Thus is set up the groundwork of developments that find the youngsters gradually being won over from rebellion to co-operation and an active part in the events that send their former oppressors up the river for a longer "stretch" than theirs.

The play has been worked out to unfold itself in trip-hammer action and colorful and pungent speech. Following a bit of the pattern of "Dead End," there is an older sister of one of the boys who supplies the romance presumably needed in the life of the assistant commissioner. The boys, at first, don't think so, but they come around. Incidentally, these young hellions, like Danielle Darrieux, on another downtown screen, "can took it." They have to, to stand up under the realistic physical beatings to which they are repeatedly subjected.

The roles of "the girl" and the assistant commissioner are played nicely by Gale Page and Humphrey Bogart—rather better than that in Mr. Bogart's case. One wonders at times if he wouldn't prefer to be over there on the tough side with his former pals of "Dead End."

The symbols of the State's incompetency in reclaiming juvenile delinquents are impersonated with appropriate brutality by Cy Kendall and Weldon Heyburn. There has been a little thieving going on at the reformatory that doesn't help their case any either, but they play their roles with such fidelity to type that one doesn't much care. There are many minor roles that are portrayed with as much skill as the rough-and-ready nature of the picture demands.

Jitterbugs Go Crazy.

The stage bill at the Earle this week keeps pace with the high-pressure qualities of the screen play. It does better than that, as a matter of fact. With Gene Krupa and his "swing" orchestra providing the entertainment, it takes on all of the robust proportions of a major riot—or did at yesterday afternoon's first performance. Like Tommy Dorsey and his band, Gene Krupa stands ace high with the jitterbugs. They packed the house to the last inch of standing room yesterday and made so much noise with their off-beat handclapping, shouting and general pandemonium that it was almost impossible to detect what it was they came to hear.

Mr. Krupa, in addition to driving the juvenile audience practically "nuts" with his drumming, introduced several specialists who seemed to have a similar effect. In this respect, Nichols and Roberts, "king and queen of the shag," stood foremost—only they didn't stand. They jiggled and quivered and kicked and pranced. Irene Daye fared a little better in some well-sung songs, but Leo Watson, a colored "scat" singer blew the roof off with his syncopated gibberish. Tommy Trent introduced his "Puppet Parade," an act familiar to Washington, and scored right up there with the rest of them—as usual.

The Paramount News rounds out an entertainment that is no place to go to take a nap.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., June 17.—Carthay Circle Theater is the place. July 8 is the time. For the biggest opening this town will ever see—"Marie Antoinette." Started over two years ago by the late Irving Thalberg. Worked on by Sidney Franklin, who literally searched the world for someone to replace Charles Laughton as Louis XVI. He found him in the person of Robert Morley, at the Gate Theater, London, where he was playing "Oscar Wilde."

HEDDA HOPPER

And six months ago the finest script ever handed a director was given to Woody Van Dyke. All kinds of wild rumors were afloat that he wouldn't get on with Norma Shearer. They both made monkeys out of their predictors. I watched a great deal of it being shot and Norma has given the finest performance of her entire life. She's set a standard so high she's going to have a heck of a time living up to it herself.

In these days of strife, it will be interesting to watch the fall of another empire. This picture won't have a preview. That, my buddies, will be an opening. Wouldn't surprise me if they built the fountains of Versailles on the land where Snow White held court with her seven dwarfs. They'll probably get the Douglas plane—which carries 47 people—to drop pearls on the populace.

They take the air for one hour, using four masters of ceremonies: Clark Gable, Bob Taylor, Spencer Tracy and Robert Young. With speeches specially written for the occasion. Also for those invited to the michrophone. The listeners' ears won't be split by silly giggles and immature voice saying, "Hello, Mama—it's a beautiful sight, wish you were here . . . good night."

The man who made this possible won't be here to share in its glory. His bungalow at the studio stands exactly as it was on the day he left. Shades drawn, desk dust covered. A silent, solemn tribute to one of the biggest little men in this business, Irving Thalberg.

If he knew, I'm sure he'd like those shades up with sun pouring through, and used as a quiet place for his friends to come and meditate when they have tough problems to solve. You know, it was Irving who loved the sea, but not the sound of it—and slept in a sound-proof room beside it.

The shriners have gone. Those they enjoyed most were Mary Pickford, Harold Lloyd and Clark Gable, who never let them down. They were all fascinated by our drive-in cafes on every street corner. And marveled that Hollywood ate its food sitting in its motor cars.

At a tiny hole-in-the-wall at Santa Monica, I saw a poorly dressed girl bring in her own sandwiches and ask for a cup of coffee. A shriner sitting next her begged for a bite. She broke off half a sandwich, handed it to him, which he divided among his friends. Girl's generous gesture was so spontaneous, he passed his fez and collected $29 for her.

Short Shorts.

Found a bride for my Dachshund, Wolf, at Alice Brady's cocktail party. Bride owned by Henry Koster, who directed "Rage of Paris." Alice is perfectly well and rearin' to go again. So bring on those dramatic parts.

Hear that Clara Bow is desperately ill. And that Simone Simon married her lawyer.

Nice to know that 1,500 cities are giving "Bowls of Rice" parties tonight, which will benefit the stricken Chinese. I'll be eating mine in Chinatown, San Francisco, with a dozen Hollywood stars who've gone up there to aid the cause.

John Frederic, Mad Hatter from New York—mad like a fox—came home from the races Saturday with $1,800. He's house-guesting with Sidney Guilaroff, sensational hair stylist M.G.M. brought out from New York. Now we're getting somewhere—hair and hats in the same household.

When Joan Crawford gave up her old telephone number, Jane Withers got it. Jane now chats merrily with all the stars she's never met before, but wanted to.

The first line Luise Rainer spoke after her divorce was to gorgeous Korjus, "So you've taken my husband from me." But it happened on "The Great Waltz" set, and she meant Fernand Gravet.

I'll bet the studios will grab Katharine Dayton who wrote "First Lady," and who's visiting friends here. She has the quaintest sense of humor, and her general conversation rippies. She was amused when a producer asked her for a Puss In Boots story for Claudette Colbert, because censorship was so tough.

Tallulah Bankhead is so quiet folks won't recognize her when she comes West to try out a new play. At a recent White House party, she sat beside Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt listening to folk songs until 2 a. m. Now you tell one.

Jessie Busby, who's had a year and a half of "The Women" in New York, is here playing with Kay Francis, and says she never played with a sweeter person. Those stores of Kay's temperament must have been a figment of a fertile imagination.

Palace

This is rather a brave and beautiful picture.

Oh, it doesn't name names perhaps. The marching groups, the rioting crowds, the window-smashers might wear brown or black or vari-colored shirts and believe in this creed or that edict, but it does name conditions and it does plead, without propaganda for peace and understanding and purpose in a drifting world, a very modern plea for all the 1920 date of the picture.

And it does all this very humanly. Of first importance, probably, from the audience viewpoint, is the fact that makes a love story important and vital and moving. That is something the movies have not done often recently—perhaps because we have been too concerned with "social significance" to bother with love, or because the romances handed out have been so false or petty or uninspired that we forgot love also has social significance.

In "Three Comrades" you can't forget it. Pat is more than just a girl that one of the comrades loves and marries. She is a center of life for three people who have had no center to their lives since the war. She is a reason and a purpose and an answer, all the more so because she is like them in her drifting and also because she is ill and frail. She is as necessary to all three as the little Vetsera was to Rudolph of Hapsburg in that other memorable tragic love story of the season, "Mayerling."

Many, many thanks are due Frank Borzage and the four comrades of his cast, Margaret Sullavan, Robert Taylor, Franchot Tone and Robert Young, for making this so. It is good to get our causes down to cases as to what intolerable situations do to people.

There is a fine spirit of team work in the playing of these four all the way through the picture, a tribute to its story as well as its players. A great deal of praise has been heaped on Franchot Tone in his role of Otto. We agree with it, but we do not agree with those who find him far and away ahead of the others; who call it "his picture." We think it belongs, as it should, to all four. Otto, after all, is a very rewarding and comparatively simple part, a straightforward and sympathetic picture of a strong but emotional character, easy, indeed, for Tone, who always has been a good actor of emotion and strength, though too seldom allowed to prove it cinematically. But equally well, we like the sincerity and youngness which Robert Taylor brings to the role of Erich; the turmoil and conflict shown by Robert Young as Gottfried (the underwritten, because most dangerous, part); and the loveliness and heartbreak of Margaret Sullavan as Pat.

On the Robert Taylor slate there should be chalked up a very bright and enduring mark for his playing of Comrade.

Of course, there are things about "Three Comrades" we don't like. We feel that the character of Pat is faintly drawn, that we know very little about her and that the three comrades fall just a little inexplicably in love so suddenly. We don't particularly like the final fadeout. We do definitely feel that the sequence in which Otto tracks down Gottfried's murderer is one of the most exciting we have ever seen, and that the last line of the picture leaves us with almost the same shaking effect as that unforgettable fade out in "I'm a Fugitive." CORDELL HULL: A student who just was flunked at a Big Three college has a father who is an important political figure in a foreign country. Before flunking him, the college authorities made polite inquiry at that country's Embassy here, to ascertain whether it would be considered a national affront . . . Gurrah Shapiro: A man named Beckerman will be the first Government witness to link you directly with the fur racket . . . Judge William Clark: A New Jersey Senator tried to muster opposition against your judicial promotion, to delay it until the fall—when the Hague trial is over. But he changed his mind, and was won over.

The Washington Post Sports

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Detroit, June 17.—The boy they booed in April is doing very well these June days. Showered with the jeers of Griffith Stadium skeptics at the start of the season, young George Case has flowered as a prized member of the Washington ball club.

POVICH

He couldn't quite understand that sour reception he had been given by Washington fans back in April. Sure he muffed a fly ball and he had messed up a couple of hits into right-field, but he didn't think that big league fans were so quick to boo rookies. He was in a mood to put histhumb to his nose, face the stands and agitate his fingers vigorously.

Manager Bucky Harris, more tolerant than the fans, attempted to soothe the hot-tempered young outfielder. "Forget those wolves out there," he told Case. "It's a long season. Keep your chin up." But the Nats' manager was more than a bit disappointed in the rookie's play. He benched him.

Languishing on the bench, Case was unhappy. There was a touch of surliness in his attitude. He hadn't had a fair chance, he honestly believed. Untalkative, he was put down by his teammates as something of a young grouch. Case didn't care. Still vividly with him was the memory of those boos.

• • • •

The Nats weren't going anywhere when June 1 arrived. They were recently back from a disastrous road trip that saw them lose 9 out of 12 starts. Bucky Harris was ready to gamble. Al Simmons wasn't going well. Neither were his other outfielders, Mel Almada and Johnny Stone. His eyes fell on Case. It was an idea. So Harris put the rookie back in the line-up.

The Chicago White Sox were in Washington then. And Case was getting his chance. That day he made only one hit in four times at bat. But it was a screaming two-bagger. And it was the birth of one of the most sensational batting sprees of the season. From there Case went on.

Since that date, Harris has started him in eight games. And the rookie has been setting a terrific pace. In not a single game has he been hitless. Doubles, triples and a home run have rocketed from his bat. Right-handers and left-handers alike, he has been pounding. He has blossomed as the best hitting outfielder on the club.

• • • •

Twenty hits in his last 44 times at bat is the impressive record of Case since that day when Harris reinstated him in the Nats' outfield. That means an average of .455 for the eleven-game stretch. Three of those blows by Case were triples, four were doubles and today he hit his first home run in the big leagues.

And there isn't anything uncertain now about his fielding. On the defense, too, he is beginning to act like a big leaguer. He is catching ball with apparent nonchalance, the mark of the sure-handed gentry. His speed enables him to get to the proper spot and there is no lack of nerve as he gallops against the fences to haul down hard-hit balls.

Today, for example, he virtually scaled the rightfield wall in Briggs Stadium to haul down Gehringer's terrific drive and in the next inning, with a fine disregard for the danger of crashing into the rightfield boxes, he made a spectacular one-hand catch of Lawson's liner.

He's beginning to feel his newfound place in the scheme of things with the Nats. And he loves it. He's having a taste of big-league stardom and has developed an amazing hunger for it. He's fighting with all the impetuosity of youth to keep his place in the sun. He's demanding everything he thinks he ought to have.

• • • •

He's riding hard on the umpires with a fine disregard for what they may think of him or what retaliations they may be disposed to make. When they call him out on a close play he leaps to his feet and shouts angrily. He wants all that is coming to him and his temper is short. In Cleveland the other day he poured out a torrent of wrath against Umpire Grieve who had called him out at the plate on a play in which Case was apparently safe.

"I'll get you for this," he shouted at Grieve, and the umpire laughed in his face.

Ball players never "get" umpires, Bucky Harris told Case after the game. The umps always have the last word, the Nats' manager pointed out to the rookie. But Case's threat was the tip-off on his small-boy temperament.

He doesn't strike you as a lad who is given to angry outburst. Always hatless, with a shock of curly hair, his is a sort of mama's boy face. Nice-looking kid, you'd say if you saw him close. So shy, too. But there's nothing shy about him when he puts on that batter's box or starts chasing against the fences after those hard-hit balls.

Bucky Harris is not only willing but eager to string along with the lad. He's a refreshing contrast to certain dead wood on the Washington club. In truth, Harris likes a bit of temper. Especially when it is accompanied by the kind of a batting average Case is sporting.

Dr. Bill Lally, one of Washington's better-known fishermen, brought in a turtle weighing about 70 pounds as he and Dr. Maurice Conley and Mrs. M. May Douglass were angling at Solomons Island yesterday.

In addition to this struggling effort of Dr. Lally, the trio spent a successful day pulling in about 40 fishes, most of which were rock, hardheads and trouts.

Bees Down Cubs Twice, 1-0 and 3-2

Mueller's Homer Takes First; Cubs Rally Late in Second.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 17.—Airtight pitching and a stonewall defense enabled the Boston Bees to take both ends of the Bunker Hill Day double-header with the Cubs, 1-0 and 3-2, before a 12,645 crowd.

Jim Turner held the Cubs to five hits while getting a shutout in the opener, which was decided in the seventh when Ray Mueller lashed a drive into the leftfield stands. Bill Lee gave the Bees five hits while dropping his third game of the season.

The Bees scored all of their second game runs before starter Larry French could retire a batter in the first inning of the nightcap. Elbie Fletcher opened the Boston side by taking first on Herman's error and Gooney, Garms, English and Cuccinello hit safely before French was yanked for Charlie Root.

Johnny Lanning held the Cubs scoreless until the eighth, when Jurges singled, Hack tripled and scored on Herman's safety. Manager Casey Stengle became alarmed when Lanning passed O'Dea to open the ninth and rushed in Ira Hutchinson, who set down the Cubs in order to wind up the game.

Tribe Beats Macks, 8 to 1

Allen Hangs Up Eighth Victory of Season.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, June 17.—Johnny Allen had plenty of stuff today and took over Connie Mack's Athletics, 8 to 1, for his eighth victory of the season to give Cleveland its third straight triumph and a full game lead over the idle Yankees.

The temperamental speedball artist allowed seven bases on balls and hit a batter, but passed out only five hits to Philadelphia and struck out seven.

The Athletics threatened several times but never had much chance after the Indians collected three runs in the first inning off Lee (Buck) Ross.

Lary opened with a single and Campbell lifted a home run over the rightfield wall. After an out and a single, Trosky's infield out brought Hale home for the third run and Cleveland never stopped. The Indians picked up two more in the fifth, one in the seventh and two in the eighth.

The Athletics' lone tally in the series opener came in the fifth when Werber's triple scored Finney, who had walked.

Earl Averill, Tribe outfielder and leading major league hitter, connected for three blows in four official trips and Hal Trosky, his slugging teammate, got two out of five trips in Cleveland's 12-hit attack.

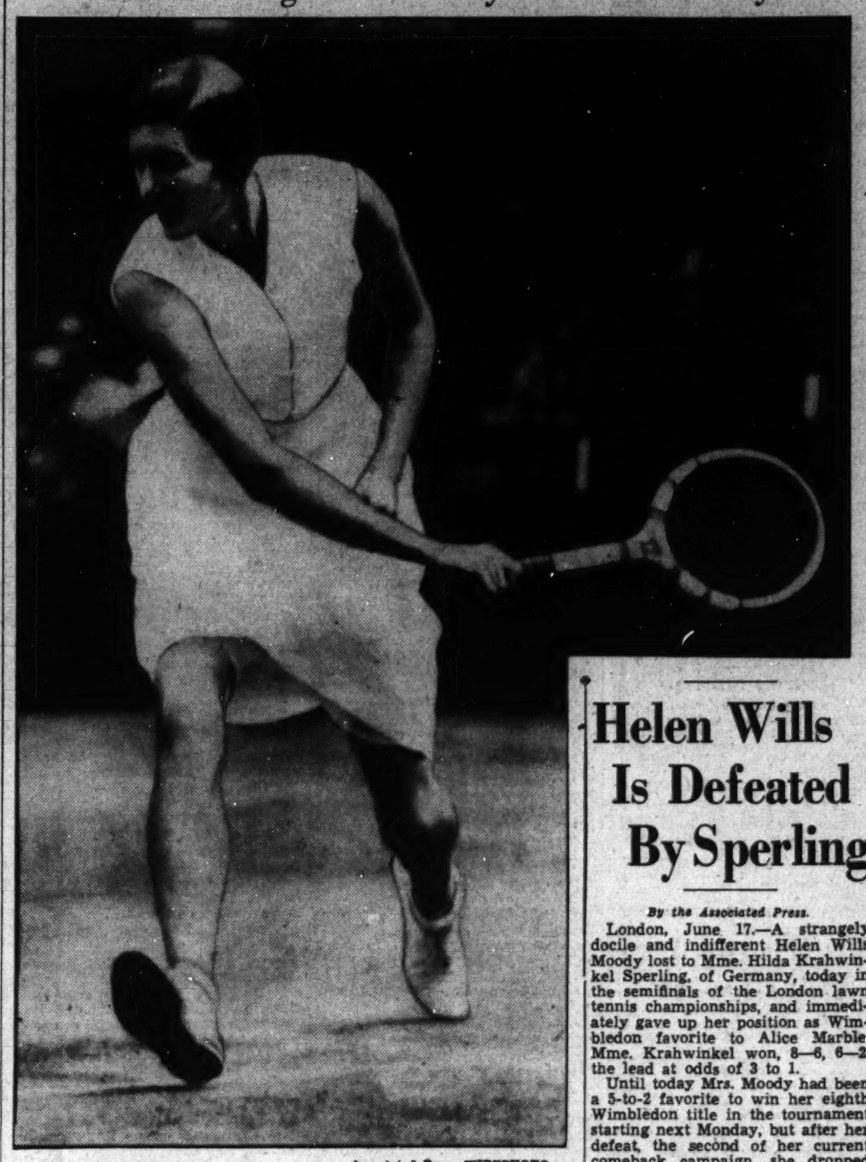
Scores Straight-Set Victory Over Mrs. Moody



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Helen Wills Moody met her second reverse on her current European invasion yesterday when Hilda Krahwinkel Sperling, (above), champion of Denmark, scored a straight set victory over the former queen of world tennis courts in the semi-final round of the London Lawn Tennis Championships. The scores were 8—6, 6—2.

Helen Wills Is Defeated By Sperling

By the Associated Press.

London, June 17.—A strangely docile and indifferent Helen Wills Moody lost to Mme. Hilda Krahwinkel Sperling, of Germany, today in the semifinals of the London lawn tennis championships, and immediately gave up her position as Wimbledon favorite to Alice Marble. Mme. Krahwinkel won, 8—6, 6—2, the lead at odds of 3 to 1.

Until today Mrs. Moody had been a 5-to-2 favorite to win her eighth Wimbledon title in the tournament starting next Monday, but after her defeat, the second of her current comeback campaign, she dropped to 4 to 1, while Miss Marble took the lead at odds of 3 to 1.

Beaten by Ruth Mary Hardwick in the recent St. George's Hill tournament, Helen today was leading at 5—3 in the first set when suddenly she appeared to lose her touch against Mme. Sperling's soft safe returns.

She didn't go into the fore court more than four times during the match, let the German star catch her and go on to win the first set, and then let her run away with the second.

Critics pointed out that when Miss Hardwick beat her Helen was due to play Jadwiga Jedrzejowska the next day. The same was true today, for Mlle. Jedrzejowska gained the other final bracket by beating Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Boston, 6—J3, 6—2, and as a result some observers believe that Mrs. Moody does not want to meet the hard-hitting Polish champion until the Wimbledon tournament.

Edith Clarke Wins Crown

Defeats Mrs. Robinson in Maryland Finals.

Baltimore, June 17.—Edith Clarke, former San Diego (Calif.) star, is the new Maryland State Women's tennis champion.

Miss Clarke, who a few months ago went to Washington, to take up residence, today defeated Mrs. Stanley G. Robinson, also of Washington, in straight sets, 6—3, 6—4.

Mrs. Robinson, the defending champion, ascended the throne a year ago when she defeated Anne Harrison, of Baltimore.

The final round of the women's event was carried off with quick dispatch by Miss Clarke. She exhibited the same speed and confidence which characterized her play in the early rounds. The loss of seven games to Mrs. Robinson in the finals saw Miss Clarke complete the entire tournament yielding only 16 games to all of her opponents combined.

Speed, power and aggressive tennis won the day for the former Californian. She used a long flat stroke which cut the top of the net closely and bit deeply into the grass court. Mrs. Robinson experienced difficulty handling the shots that came her way.

The two women started out a bit cautiously, but after getting the feel of the court, Miss Clarke seized the advantage, varied her game between back court and net tactics and by breaking through Mrs. Robinson's service twice, won the set.

The second set was not unlike the first, with Miss Clarke using the same tactics and Mrs. Robinson attempting to outsteady her opponent.

Mrs. Robinson and Miss Clarke took the women's doubles from Sarah Moore and Margo Lee, of Washington, 6—2, 6—3.

Later, Mrs. Robinson and Gilbert Hunt, of Washington, won the mixed doubles match by eliminating Miss Clarke and Alec Keiles, of Baltimore, 16—14, 6—3.

Singles consolations—Eleanor Colston defeated Frances Carter, Washington, 6—3, 6—4.

Reach Golf Finals.

Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla., June 17 (AP).—Carl Dann, jr., of Orlando, the Florida champion, and Jennings Gordon, of Rome, Ga., advanced today to the finals of the southern amateur golf championship. They will meet at 36 holes tomorrow.

Chisox Drop 5-1 Decision

Knott Hurler in Eighth Straight Loss.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 17.—The struggling White Sox, who haven't scored a victory at home since May 25, found a new starting pitcher no solution to their woes today as the Boston Red Sox peppered Jack Knott, formerly of St. Louis, for 10 hits in his White Sox debut and defeated Chicago, 5-1, in the opener of a four-game series.

It was the eighth consecutive home defeat for Jimmie Dykes' troupe and the seventeenth loss in their last 23 games.

Earning his season's seventh victory, Jack Wilson shut out the seventh placers until the ninth when the White Sox bunched three of their eight hits for a consolation tally.

Jim Foxx, one of the four Red Sox to get two hits, singled in one run in the fourth to raise his runs batted in total to 72.

Phils Lose To Bucs, 4-3

Pitcher's Wild Heave Loses 10-Inning Tilt.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 17.—Two wild pitches today cost Al Hollingsworth a victory over Pittsburgh in his first start as a pitcher for the Phillies. His second wild heave came in the tenth inning with two out and permitted Handley to score from third with the run that gave the Pirates a 4-3 triumph.

In the seventh Hollingsworth's first wild pitch gave the Pirates their first run. Otherwise, the former Cincinnati southpaw outpitched Bill Swift and Mace Brown. Brown, who replaced Swift in the eighth, received credit for the victory. He fanned Phil Weintraub with the bases full in the eighth to end the Phils' last threat.

Homers Help Giants Beat Cards, 10-3

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 17.—Led by Hank Leiber and Jo Jo Moore, the New York Giants let go with a 16 hit attack today to wallop the St. Louis Cardinals, 10 to 3.

The victory, plus two defeats for the Chicago Cubs boosted the Giants National League lead to three games.

Leiber's homer with the bases full in the fifth was the big blow of the day. Hank's sixth of the year, the drive hit the top of the left field stands and just about ended Lonnie Warneke's stay in the box. He walked the next batter and Ray Harrell relieved him.

Reds Sweep Bargain Bill

Dodgers Bow, 4-3 and 12-10; First Overtime.

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, June 17.—The Cincinnati Reds, equally at home in a pitchers' duel and a slugging spree, played both kinds of ball today to sweep a doubleheader from the Dodgers and climb onto the heels of the National League leaders.

Big Jim Weaver, pitching a four-hiter and fanning 11, bested Van Mungo in the opener, 4 to 3, in 11 innings. Van made the mistake of giving Ernie Lombardi a home run ball in the ninth to tie the game, and then repeated the mistake in the eleventh and Ival Goodman hit his fifteenth circuit clout of the season to win the decision. Cookie Lavagetto whacked a four-bagger for the Dodgers.

In the nightcap, Bucky Walters, late of the Phillies, made his debut with the Reds, but was slugged for six runs in the first inning. The Reds, however, scored four in their first and followed it up with six more in the third and coasted in with a 12 to 10 victory. Wally Berger and Harry Craft hit homers in this one.

Keswick Hill Pays $52.40 in Third; Dun Lucky Breaks Mark.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 17.—Taking command at the first tingle of the starting bell and staying in front throughout the running, Mrs. T. H. Andrews' Castabout won The Blockade Purse, feature race named for the movie current at the Capitol Theater in Washington. Castabout, with a $13.60 price tag for her backers, was capably handled by Apprentice Jockey Eddie Kilgore.

The winning owner was given a silver trophy, donated by Madelaine Carroll, with Mrs. Harrison Conaway, of Fairmont, W. Va., wife of the prosecuting attorney of Marion County, making the presentation.

Doreen, a long shot, and Goodwine followed the triumphant daughter of Belli Casus to the imaginary wire in the race over the "Charles Town course", of slightly more than six furlongs. The winner turned in the creditable time of 1:17 over a fast track.

Tanganyika, a son of Sun Hatter, saved a world of ground entering the stretch to take the first race. Vendor's Lien was in front as the field reached the final turn in a bunch and he carried Ivy X., Ann Greucher and others to the outside fence. Lena Girl was second and Asterisk third. The winner, piloted by Apprentice Hacker, paid $11.20.

Keswick Hill Takes Third.

Lady Buck proved a nose winner for the favorite players in the second race, paying $4.80. The veteran mare barely got up to nip Kenner, with Ktwo third, in the group of eight. Jockey D. Scocca gave the winner a good ride.

Keswick Hill surprised the talent while under the handling of Lou Machado in the third event. The 3-year-old sailed home three lengths in advance of Rhida, with Luke Connell third. All the heavily played horses were out of the money. Keswick Hill paid $52.40 to win, while Rhida brought $71.80 to place.

Principally because Keswick Hill won the third race, the daily double paid $324.20, the highest price of the long meeting at this point.

Fowler Suspended.

An accident and a suspension marked the fourth race. Jockey Gene Terhune was rushed to the Charles Town Hospital with a deep gash in his right leg, suffered when Trostar stumbled and fell after the field had gone a furlong. Leading Ways, with Jimmy Taylor up, tripped and fell over Trostar. Taylor was uninjured. Depinard proved an easy winner for the favorite players, the gelding paying $4.20.

The stewards issued a ruling after the race, setting down Jockey Tommy Fowler for 15 days. He was aboard Memana and rushed his mount up in the pack. It is alleged that he bumped Trostar, causing the latter to fall.

The day's secondary feature, The Capitol Theater Purse, proved a romp for Morvim, with Kilgore also handling this winner. He brought the $14.80 mare home ahead of Indiana and Bungalow.

Dun Lucky set a new track record of 1¼ miles in the eighth race, the Dunlin gelding going the route in 2:06 to clip two-fifths of a second off the mark held by Rough Player. Dun Lucky led virtually all the way and finished three-lengths ahead of James Boy while winning easily. Canimar was third. Jockey Buddy Root rode the winner.

Lady Gurzil came with a bold rush in the final quarter to win the seventh race by a length and a half from Reigh Tetrarch with Monologue, the favorite, third in the field of eight. The winner paid $12.

Wiffy Cox's 140 Wins Place in P. G. A. Tourney

Down In Front

With Richards Vidmer

REPEATERS.

One of the toughest spots in the sphere of sports is winning the National Open golf championship, where there are a million players who at least have dreams, more than a thousand actual entries and finally a field of 170 competitors to conquer. Another is pitching a no-hit game in the major leagues. Yet in the last week two fellows have accomplished these tasks for the second time in succession.

VIDMER.

Someone once remarked to Walter Hagen that anybody might win the open, and Hagen agreed with the revision, "anybody might win it—once." But Ralph Guldahl not only won it twice, but twice in a row, and then went on to establish himself still more solidly as the outstanding golfer in the country by adding the Western Open to his triumphs.

It wouldn't have been surprising to see Guldahl finish way down in the Western test at St. Louis. He just had been through a long hard struggle at Cherry Hills in Denver, where the pressure was tremendous and where he had to come from behind down the stretch in order to overtake the leaders and retain his title.

* * * *

It wouldn't have been surprising if he had heaved a mental sigh and played through the Western in a casual manner, satisfied with winning the open for the second succesive year and indifferent to the lesser honors. It wouldn't have been less than human if, starting the last eighteen holes all square with Sammy Snead and a couple of other ambitious players in hot pursuit, he had cracked under the prolonged pressure.

And there was a touch of irony in that triumphant march of Guldahl's in the Western, for a few years before he had been fired from a club in St. Louis, and here he was coming back to the scene of the crime. Open champion of the country for the second successive year, outstanding player in the game today, and laughing back at the citizens of St. Louis who had turned him loose without even the usual request of native Missourians.

Twice in a Lifetime.

But even more impressive an accomplishment was the feat of young Johnny Vander Meer, who pitched his second successive no-hit game. After all, a no-hitter is something that comes to few pitchers who pass through the majors. Some of the greatest that the game has produced have served long and successful careers without ever having had the thrill of a no-hitter. And only six pitchers since the turn of the century have pitched two no-hit games in their major league lives.

Tom Hughes was one of them, although he was beaten, 1 to 0, in the tenth inning in one. Dutch Leonard of the Red Sox did it twice, so did Christy Mathewson, Frank Smith, of the White Sox; Cy Young, who turned in three no-hitters, one in 1897, one in 1904 and onein 1908, and Addie Joss was the sixth. But these men achieved two no-hitters over the courses of extended careers in the major leagues. Johnny Vander Meer has two to his credit already and he hasn't even served out a full season in the big show.

Echo of Laughter

The nearest thing to his performance that I can recall was accomplished by Dazzy Vance when he was at the height of his fame with the Dodgers in 1925. The dazzler pitched one Sunday against the Phillies and turned them back with one hit. His laughter through the late innings could be heard in the bleachers at Ebbets field and most of his chuckles were directed toward Arthur Fletcher, then manager of the futile Phils, who was coaching at third base.

When the last man was out, Fletcher's chisel chin was out to here and there was fire in his eyes. Daz passed him on the way to the dressing room and laughed in his face.

A week went by during which Vance didn't pitch, but the following Sunday when the Phillies came back to Brooklyn it was his turn again. As he was warming up before the game, Fletcher strolled past with a sneer on his face and growled:

"If we don't get more than one hit off you today, I'll kiss your foot on the home plate."

With two out in the ninth inning, Daz turned toward third base where Fletcher was coaching, and there was a broad grin on his face.

"I'll be at the home plate just as soon as I get this guy out," he laughed. The Phils didn't get any hits at all.

* * * *

Howard Ehmke, of the Athletics, also pitched two successive games, allowing only one hit in the pair, reversing Vance's process. He pitched the no-hitter first and in his next start held the Yanks to a single safety, a tepid sort of tap by Whitey Witt in the first inning.

The greatest sustained string of low-hit pitching which comes to mind was turned in by Ferdie Schupp during the Giants' record winning streak of 26 games, made in 1916. Schupp won six of those games, four of them shutouts, allowing one run in another and two runs in the remaining contest. There wasn't a no-hitter in the list, but there was one one-hitter, two two-hitters, two three-hitters and in the other the little left-hander completely went to pieces. He was such a soft touch that the other team got all of six safe blows.

And there's one other great streak of pitching that should not be forgotten as long as we're going through the statistics. That's Walter Johnson's record of 56 successive scoreless innings. Over six complete games without allowing a run to be scored!

(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

George Washington Case makes a notable gain in the Man of the Month contest as a result of his performance in yesterday's twin bill at Detroit.

To Case, seven points, because he made four hits in the first game, including a double and a home run, and because in the second game he made two spectacular catches against the fence in rightfield.

To Al Simmons, three points, because he hit two home runs in the first game.

To Sammy West, two points, because his home run in the ninth inning of the second game accounted for two of the Nats' three runs in that contest.

To Buddy Lewis, two points, because he valiantly tried to keep the Nats in the second game by hitting a home run in the ninth after hitting a double in the fifth.

To Cecil Travis, two points, because he made three hits in the second game and because he put the tying run on base with a single in the ninth.

To Dutch Leonard, two points, because he allowed only eight hits in limiting the Tigers to four runs in the second game.

To Rick Ferrell, one point, because he made two important hits in the first game.

To Wes Ferrell, one point, because he pitched capably for eight innings in the first game and contributed two hits to the Nats' attack.

Two Upsets Recorded in Mid-Atlantic

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., June 17.—Farmington's amateur course record was lowered to 68 strokes today as both Defending Champion Billy Shea and Virginia Titleholder Dick Payne bowed to sparkling shotmaking at the start of match play in the thirty-fourth annual mid-Atlantic tournament.

Bobby Brownell, Duke University freshman, whose home is in Washington, went out in 34 this afternoon and came back in the same figures to eliminate Walter Cushman, Charlottesville, 4 and 3. Brownell played on through the eighteenth and his card, two under a stern par, was the best ever turned in from the back tees, over the up and down hill layout, by an amateur.

The dark-haired youngster meets another Capital City entry, the veteran Martin McCarthy, in tomorrow morning's semifinals and Otto Greiner, a University of Baltimore freshman, engages Charlie Kent, experienced Richmond campaigner. The 18-hole finals will be played tomorrow afternoon.

Greiner Beats Shea.

Shea was the 2 and 1 victim of the more consistent Greiner, the tourney medalist, and Payne lost to Washington's stocky Russ Hollebaugh, 1 up, after dissipating a 3-up lead on the home nine.

Hollebaugh's game reversed itself in the second round when he took an early lead, but bowed to McCarthy's deadly uphill stroking on the narrow, wooded fairways of the back nine. He muffed a short putt on the eighteenth for a half which would have sent the match to an extra hole.

A burning sun beamed on the course most of today in contrast to the heavy rain which drenched yesterday's qualifying round.

Kant's 2 and 1 victory over Wynsol Spencer, 18-year-old Newport News lad, was the afternoon round's biggest surprise. Spencer, a frail appearing lad who packs amazing power behind his shots, was ahead of Kent from the tee, but succumbed to Kent's accurate putting, the best of the tournament. Spencer's card showed 71 strokes, while Kent had 72. Kent had a 38 going out and was one down at the turn but he clipped a stroke from par for a sizzling 34 coming in.

Brownell Downs Payne.

Cushman, runner-up to Payne in the 1937 State amateur at Hot Springs and gallery favorite as a home town entry, was also a loser with a 71 to Brownell's par-busting 68.

Greiner's golf has been the most consistent of the meet. His qualifying card was 72, which topped a field of 79 leading amateurs from Virginia, Maryland, the District of Columbia. He duplicated this 72 card against Shea and was blazing across the course at two under par when his match with Bergelin ended on the thirteenth.

The defeat of Shea, who also held the District of Columbia amateur title, was his first in match play in a year, Payne's beating was his first in about two years but he was tied in a university team match this spring.

Down Through the Heavyweights

Gene Tunney Beats Dempsey Twice

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Kept in power by a sling-shot right that lulled more than one challenger to sleep, Dempsey remained atop the turbulent heap seven years until a handsome young Irishman, Gene Tunney, challenged him for the title. They met in a rain-drenched ring the stormy night of September 23, 1926, at Philadelphia, and in 10 rounds Tunney jabbed and boxed his way to the crown.

Dissatisfied with the outcome the deposed champion sought a return bout, and after stopping Jack Sharkey in seven rounds, won the right to meet Tunney a second time at Chicago.

In September of the following year with an all-time record of more than $2,000,000 in the box-office they clashed at Soldier's Field, and for a few brief, transient seconds it appeared that Dempsey might become the first man in history to regain his lost title. That was in the seventh round when he lashed out with a paralyzing left hook and dropped Tunney for the now famous "long count." Dave Barry was the referee, and a legion of fans steadfastly maintain that he, more than Tunney, prevented Dempsey from accomplishing the feat.

Dempsey took his defeat philosophically. It meant the end of the trail for him. Tunney drew on the mittens once more, scoring a technical knockout over Tom Heeney in 11 rounds, in 1928, at New York, then retired undefeated.

His withdrawal from the ring left the title race wide open, but shrewd Tex Rickard quickly thinned out the field and narrowed the battle down to two men, Jack Sharkey and Max Schmeling, by a widely ballyhooed elimination tournament. They clashed June 12, 1930 at New York, and Sharkey was disqualified for striking a low blow in the fourth round.

Lying prostrate on the canvas, his face creased in agony, Schmeling was awarded the title, and thereby became the first man in history to gain the honor stretched on the canvas.

Sets New Meet Mark and Ties American Record in Qualifying for 120-Yard High Hurdles.

By the Associated Press.

Minneapolis, June 17.—Flying over the high hurdles in record-smashing time, blond Fred Wolcott, of Rice Institute, stole a big share of honors from the title-seeking Southern California Trojans in today's qualifying trials of the seventeenth national collegiate track and field championships.

The sophomore from the Houston, Tex., school, who is undefeated in collegiate competition, raced through the 120-yard high hurdles in 14 seconds, setting a new meet mark and tying the American record made by Bob Osgood, of Michigan, in 1937. The former meet mark was 14.1, originally set by George Saling, of Iowa, in 1932 and equaled by Forrest Towns, of Georgia, in 1936.

The manner in which Wolcott set the new meet mark, however, apparently was more remarkable than his actual accomplisnment. He won his heat by five full yards from Ivy Bledsoe of Southern California and was running easily at the finish, serving notice he has a great chance in tomorrow's finals to equal, if not smash, the world's record of 13.7 made by Towns in Oslo, Norway, in 1936.

Trojans Get Busy.

Dean Cromwell's Trojans lost little time in opening their march to qualifiying supremacy which topped 40 schools placing men in Saturday's championship events. They placed two men in the first event, the 440-yard dash, then followed with two each in the 100-yard dash and 120-yard high hurdles, javelin and discus. They also will be represented in the 220-yard low hurdles and shot put.

Two schools qualified five men each. California and Rice Institute, with Stanford, Texas University, and Michigan each placing four men in the finals.

Ben Johnson, Columbia's fleet Negro star; Mack Robinson, of Oregon, and Wolcott were the day's double winners of trial heats. Wolcott, in addition to his 120-yard high hurdles job, came home in front in his 220-yard low hurdle test. Johnson and Robinson won heats in the 100 and 220-yard dashes.

Most favorites came through as expected but the 100-yard dash saw two stars fall by the wayside. Marty Glickman, of Syracuse, 1936 Olympic sprinter, and Adrian Talley, Southern California's Coast Conference champion, both were shut out in the second heat. Charlie Belcher, Georgia Tech's Southeast Conference titleholder, failed to qualify in the 440-yard dash.

John Woodruff, Pittsburgh's great middle distance runner, withdrew from the 440-yard run to save himself for the half mile, in which he is defending champion. He qualified today in 1:53, a full three and three-tenths seconds slower than the N. C. A. A. mark he made last year.

D. C. Netmen Play For Tennis Trophy

Washington and Richmond gained the right to play today for the Hotchkiss tennis cup championship yesterday by trouncing Norfolk and Baltimore, respectively, 8—1 and 7—2.

Yesterday's results:

Ravis, 6—3, 6—3; Bobby Ball (R) defeated Harry Jacobson, 8—6, 6—4; Jack Lewis (R) defeated George Hebner, 6—4, 6—1; Cook Hall (R) defeated Frank Roberts, 6—1, 2—6, 6—3; Robert Jones (R) defeated Barton Harvey, 6—2, 6—3; William L. West Pleases Bucky Harris

Sammy Will Play Center Against All Pitchers.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Detroit, June 17.—Wearing a "Happy am I" expression, Sammy West rejoined the Nats today after a six-year absence and quickly slugged himself into favor with Manager Bucky Harris.

West made only one hit in each game of the doubleheader with the Tigers but both were important blows. He contributed a clean single to the Nats' five-run attack in the first inning of the opener to celebrate his debut in a Washington uniform, and in the ninth inning of the second game it was his home run with a man on base that reinstated the Nats in the ball game.

"Wotta relief to get away from that club," he smiled. "They're nice fellows and I like Gabby Street but it's no fun playing with a team that always figures to get licked."

Manager Bucky Harris lost no time in telling the veteran West what his status on the Washington club was to be.

"You're our regular center fielder against all kinds of pitching, Sammy," said Harris. "Now go out there and play some ball for us."

Originally, Harris had slated Johnny Stone and Taft Wright for outfield duty in today's first game but when the left-handed Jake Wade went to the mound for the Tigers after the first five hitters had knocked Elden Auker out, Harris made hurried substitutions. He sent in the right-handed Al Simmons and George Case.

Lawson's victory in the second game was his second of the season—both achieved at the expense of the Washington club.

Dundee, Furr Arrive Here

A picture of sartorial elegance, the fistic firm of Chris Dundee, manager, and Phil Furr, fighter, arrived in town last night, apparently ready to step right into the ring and beat the daylights out of George Abrams, whom Furr tangles with Monday night at the ball park.

Their arrival climaxed an afternoon of dizzy happenings, or nonhappenings, to coin a phrase, that had the press, matchmaker and a few innocent bystanders frothing at the mouth.

Furr, it was advertised, would indulge in a private workout at the Huron gym at 1 p. m. He wasn't at the appointed spot, and Dundee, furthermore, declared he wasn't supposed to have a local workout until today, and that it most emphatically will not be private. Anybody who wants to see the District welterweight king go through his paces—including Abrams—is invited. The time is 1 p. m.

Furr's right hand, the wrist of which was fractured, is as good as new, and maybe better. He clunked it against the photographic department brick wall a couple of times to illustrate its efficiency, and intimated that Abrams will not relish feeling its harsh caress. He looks great, physically, and weighs around 150 pounds, which is all he'll scale at fight time.

"I've got his number," he said moving toward the doorway, "It's double zero."

Errie Ball, Andy Gibson Also Victors

Diffenbaugh or Walper to Be Selected for Fourth Berth.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey,

A Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore Country Club, June 17. Playing his first 36 holes of golf in a single day since the Augusta national tournament last March, Wiffy Cox, Congressional's master of the mashie mechanics, matched Five Farm's rugged par of 140 here today to pace the field of 25 pros in the P. G. A. qualifying trials and gain one of the four berths.

Cox was hard pressed for the medalist honors by the Scotsman from Bonnie View, Andy Gibson, who continued his recent sensational streak of golf with a 141 total and second low, while Errie Ball, blond Britisher from Charlottesville, with a 143 total, split the first three scores between the two States and the District.

Washington gained the edge however as the fourth representative to the national event at Shawnee-on-the-Delaware, while not yet known, due to a protest lodged against George Diffenbaugh's next best total of 146, will either be Diffenbaugh or Leo Walper, who bested Mel Shorey, East Potomac, in a nine-hole playoff, 36—39, after the two deadlocked at 147.

Diffenbaugh Challenged.

William Schreiber, secretary of the Middle Atlantic P. G. A., received a wire, a few hours before the qualifying rounds were scheduled to start, from Tom Walsh, secretary of the national body, that Diffenbaugh was ineligible, as his dues for the present quarter were received four days too late. On May 24 the Kenwood professional immediately lodged a protest, saying his check had been mailed in time.

Ralph Beach, president of the local body, and Schreiber ordered a play off between Walper and Shorey, to decide the fourth representative from this sector in case the original message from the national organization is final.

Cox mixed the most brilliant round of the day with his medal winning total, a 31 on the incoming nine of the morning round, that added to his 38 gave him a 69 and a stroke lead on ball at the halfway mark. Four birdies and five pars dotted his four under par 31, that was the best of the day by three strokes.

In the afternoon he was out in 36 with a birdie on the seventh and bogeys on two and nine, and he climaxed the fine round with a 25-foot putt for a birdie on the final hole that made up for his bogey four on the seventeenth and enabled him to best Gibson by a stroke.

Gibson Finds Trouble.

Gibson, who has monopolized the pro sweepstakes events this year, turned the first nine in 33, two under par, but was in trouble on 11 and 12 on the second nine and finished with a 38 and 71. In the afternoon he was a model of consistency from tee to green with 36-34, 70 and his 141 total.

Ball played the course for the first time and matched the score card for the first 27 holes before he began "steering" his shots on the last nine and jumped to a 38 and 73. He had only two birdies over the route.

Diffenbaugh rounded the ninth hole three under par with a 32, but soared to 41 on the back nine for a first-round 73. After going three over par on the outgoing nine of the afternoon round, he came back in 34, with birdies on the tenth hole and the eighteenth, the last one, enabling him to best Walper and Shorey by a stroke. His final putt was some 20 feet.

Walper was tied for ninth place after a first-round 75, but rallied to hit every green on the first nine in regulation figures in the afternoon for a 35, went over on the tenth hole and two over later, but birdied 17 with a 10-foot putt for a deuce and parred 18 to tie Shorey.

Eighteenth Fatal to Shorey.

The eighteenth hole cost Shorey a place, going three over par for the day on the finishing hole, with a six in the opening round and five on the next. His rounds of 74 and 73 were the most consistent of the day.

In the lay-off Walper picked up strokes on the second, third and seventh holes and won with a one over par total, making him eight over par for the 45 holes of play.

Wheat Prices Lower After Erratic Day

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 17.—Big arrivals of newly harvested wheat southwest turned Chicago prices downward today at the last after the market had fluctuated with unusual nervousness for hours. In the main, fractional losses constituted the outcome.

Setbacks and bulges of values followed each other in rapid succession over a range of 2¼ cents, with trade attention focusing finally on the fact that in Enid, Okla., alone the receipts totaled 403 cars, and that elsewhere southwest the new crop movement was also heavy, showing a decided increase over yesterday.

A stimulus which times helped to bring about price rallies was that North American export business amounted to 750,000 bushels. The bulk, however, consisted of wheat from Canada.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ⅞ lower, compared with yesterday's finish, July 78 ⅝-¾, September 79 ¾-⅞, corn ¼ to 1 cent advanced, July 57 ½-⅝, September 59-59 ⅛, oats ⅛-⅜ up, rye showing ⅜-⅞ drop, and provisions 5 to 10 cents decline.

Cotton Rise Carries Prices To New Highs

October Sells Up to 8.41 Cents a Pound and Closes at 8.35.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 17.—Cotton sold into further new high ground for the movement early today but encountered profit taking and reacted partially. October sold off from 8.41 to 8.33 and closed at 8.35, with final prices 4 to 5 points net higher.

Opening advances of 4 to 5 points were at, or within a few points of, the best levels for the day. Demand from Liverpool, Bombay and scattered commission house sources reflected firmness at Liverpool, renewed talk of the possibilities of gold devaluation and unfavorable rains in the Western belt. A let-up in the foreign buying checked the advance and the market then became susceptible to moderate realizing, partly by earlier buyers.

Weekly statistics showed a continued slow forwarding of cotton to mills of the world, Exports, while small, were comparatively large for the season. Exports 16,202, making 5,857,601 for the season thus far. Port receipts 7,337; United States port stocks 2,540,480.

Prices Work Lower as Congress Adjourns Without Easing Rail Crisis; Cotton Higher.

New York, June 17.—Share prices eased in a thin market today, softness in rails being communicated to the bond section where high-grade carrier obligations were in some cases down as much as a point. Metal stocks dropped on further unfavorable developments in the copper industry, but aside from a handful of issues, changes in quotations were of a narrow order consistent with restricted trading. Volume on the big board was 327,840 shares. Wheat finished unchanged to ⅞ cent a bushel lower at Chicago, but cotton made a little headway, today, with only a few issues reflecting buying interest at the low levels now current. Bonds of the strongest systems showed the largest losses as Congress went home without enacting any remedial legislation for the rails. United States Treasury bonds dipped slightly, as the citizenry contemplated the potential havoc of Roosevelt spending on budget figures. Foreign dollar bonds were irregular. Turnover totaled $5,080,000.

Primary liens of the leading railroads were marked only fractionally lower, but the secondary issues of such lines were weak on small transactions. Atchison Short Line 4s dipped 5 points, and Union Pacific debenture 3½s showed an equal loss. Pennsylvania bonds were down 1 to 2½ points. Medium-priced interest payers were uncertain. New York Central bonds showed gains to 2½ points and losses to 3½ points, and Southern Pacific bonds likewise were irregular. Borderline rails held close to previous figures, while default issues were soft.

Telephones Higher.

Telephone bonds improved fractionally, as completion of the Treasury refinancing turned the attention of large institutions once again to the list, while high-grade power and light operating company bonds held to former levels. Holding company securities were neglected, and speculative commodity issues uncertain. International telephone bonds were well maintained. Local tractions were in modest demand.

Long-term United States Treasury bonds drifted lower in the formal trading, the recessions ranging from 1-32 to 5-32 point. In the late counter dealings, however, most of the losses were regained. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations were idle and almost motionless. In counter-trading the usual keen demand for short dated Treasury issues was evident.

Austrian bonds were motionless in the foreign group, despite publication of the latest State Department protest against the default. German issues also were dull. Latin-American default bonds were neglected and mostly unchanged. Japanese issues finally recovered slightly, but Italians were lower. Best-grade foreigns were quiet.

Disappointment.

The lack of action by Washington with respect to railroads is, in fact, considered by Wall Street to be the major disappointment of a generally unsatisfactory session from the viewpoint of business. At the close of the lengthy sittings, it was found that the most constructive moves made were in revisions to the tax bill and liberalization of FHA loans. On the other hand, these were offset by tentative and abortive gestures with respect to a railroad problem that grew more serious day by day; adoption of further reform legislation; lack of co-operation with business and damage to general investor confidence caused by the adoption of another large and virtually unrestricted spending program.

It is largely because of the pessimism engendered by contemplation of political handicaps to genuine business recovery that markets have not followed through more strongly on moves launched by inflation ideas. While those professionally interested in stocks have professed for some time to have definite knowledge that the dollar is to be devalued soon, so-called "insiders" in Washington maintain that money juggling, if any, will be deferred for a few months. At the same time it is considered a possibility that when the American Ambassador to the Court of St. James returns early next week, inflation rumors may be rather decisively spiked.

N. Y. Central a Leader.

New York Central was the market leader for the day, off ½, although none of the other rail issues appeared in the session's most-active list. Carloadings were improved compared with the preceding week, but only because of the holiday influence in the first-of-the-month period. Steel shares lagged, with Steel common and Bethlehem losing large fractions, although advices from the producing centers were slightly more cheerful. While the action of copper companies in further curtailing domestic output, in line with a reduction of export quotas, will tend to restrict earnings still further, betterment in the statistical position of unsold stocks may be expected in coming months.

Copper Production Is Cut 10% Abroad

London, June 17 (AP).—International Copper Producers who are parties to the plan for regulating output outside the United States voted today to reduce production from 105 per cent to 95 per cent of agreed basic tonnages. This was the first change in basic tonnages since December. The cut was decided upon because of lessened demand in the European markets.

New York, June 17 (AP).—Action by foreign copper producers to cut output as reported today from London was in line, domestic copper circles said, with the trend in the domestic field.

SEC Orders Hearing On Hosiery Stock

The Securities Commission yesterday ordered a hearing to determine whether the registration of the no par value common capital stock of Interstate Hosiery Mills, Inc., should be suspended or withdrawn.

The commission said it believed financial statements in an application for registration "were false and misleading with respect to various items."

The New York Curb Exchange on February 15, 1938, temporarily suspended the stock from trading pending completion of its investigation of the company's accounts. The commission said this suspension was still in effect. The hearing will begin June 24 at the commission's New York regional office.

Freight May Indicate Beginning of Recovery

Chicago, June 17 (AP).—The rising trend in railroad freight loadings prompted the magazine Railway Age to ask today: "Has the recession stopped?"

"Has improvement in general business begun?" the publication inquired editorially. "Railroad freight loadings have so indicated since the end of April.

"Throughout the depression statistics of railroad loadings have earlier and more reliably indicated changes in the trend of general business than any or all other statistics used for this purpose.

"Loadings turned slightly upward in the first week of May and have been slowly making more than seasonal gains ever since.

"It is too soon to say positively that the apparent change is the real thing, but the figures indicate very strongly that it is."

The Thrill That Comes Once in a Lifetime.

Bob Burns Says—

I hear the word "sophisticated" used so much among the younger generation that I've decided that it must be pretty important, but to save my life, I don't know jest what it means.

I judge from the conversation that in order for a person to look sophisticated, they hav'ta have dark circles under their eyes and a night club "palor" in their cheeks. If you put one of them "lounge lizards" out in a hay field for about two months let him get a good coat of tan, he wouldn't look sophisticated at all.

Grandpa Snazzy says if you get right down to cases a girl ain't sophisticated until she has a vanity case, a cigarette case and a divorce case.
